ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syria’s rebranded al-Qaida affiliate says a senior commander who led military operations in war-wrecked Aleppo was killed in an airstrike.

A Twitter account for the Jabhat Fatah al-Sham, formerly known as Jabhat al-Nusra, said Thursday the commander of the alliance leading the fight in Aleppo was killed in an airstrike in the province rural areas. It doesn’t say when the airstrike occurred or who carried it out against the commander who goes by the name Abu Omar Saraqib or when.

The U.S-led coalition, Russia and Syrian government warplanes have been conducting airstrikes against militant groups. Jabhat al-Nusra recently changed its name, saying it was delinking with al-Qaida central command, but the move was seen as a way to avoid being targeted.

Moscow and Washington have been discussing coordinating against militants in Syria.

Meanwhile, Syrian government forces and their allies captured new ground Thursday on the edge of the contested northern city of Aleppo, tightening the siege on rebel-held parts of the city, state media and an activist group said.

The latest push came after pro-government troops recaptured several military academies over the weekend that they had lost in attacks by insurgents a month ago.

The government advance also endangers talks between Russia and the United States over a possible Aleppo cease-fire. The city, Syria’s largest and once its commercial hub, has been the focus of fighting in recent months.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said government forces backed by allied groups, including the Lebanese Hezbollah militant group, captured the Ramouseh neighborhood on the southern edge of Aleppo.

Syrian state news agency SANA quoted an unnamed military official as confirming that pro-government troops had captured large parts of Ramouseh as well as a nearby hill.

Fighting continued to rage on the southern edge of Ramouseh, according to rebel fighters, and residents of the adjacent opposition-held neighborhood of al-Sukkari reported heavy shelling.

The Observatory reported that 40 days of fighting in Aleppo has killed nearly 700 civilians, including 160 children.

On Thursday, the government denied it had carried out a toxic gas attack on civilians in Aleppo, two days after officials and rescuers in rebel-held parts of the city reported a suspected chlorine gas attack by government helicopters. They said two people died and at least 70 people suffered breathing difficulties.

Talks between Moscow and Washington have been bogged down over ways to create a lasting a cease-fire in Aleppo, among other issues.

Abdel-Salam said that while the Syrian government and its ally Russia were negotiating with the United States on a cease-fire in Aleppo, they were plotting a “new betrayal” of besieged neighborhoods, violating the spirit of the talks aimed at allowing humanitarian aid into opposition districts.

Ex-head of air force given 25 years in ‘dirty war’ case

BUENOS AIRES — The former head of the nation’s air force was convicted Thursday in the kidnapping and torture of a left-wing activist couple during the 1976-1983 dictatorship.

The court then sentenced Omar Graffigna, 90, to 25 years in prison for the 1978 abduction of Patricia Roisinblit and Jose Manuel Perez Rojo, who belonged to the Montoneros guerrilla group.

Roisinblit was pregnant when she and Perez Rojo were taken to a clandestine government detention center. Their 15-month-old daughter, Mariana, was raised by the paternal grandmother; and the couple has never been seen again — two victims among the thousands “disappeared” by the military regime.

45 people stuck overnight in cable cars at Mont Blanc

PARIS — A series of cable cars stopped working at high altitude

Thursday over the Mont Blanc massif in the Alps, prompting a major rescue operation and leaving 45 people trapped in mid-air overnight, France’s interior minister said.

Four helicopters were deployed after 110 people became stuck when the cable cars stalled because of a “technical incident,” Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve said. He said the helicopters rescued 65 people before the efforts were suspended for the night because of rough flight conditions.

First aid workers were transported to the site and will be spending the night in the cable cars with those who are trapped, Cazeneuve said. Rescuers provided blankets, food and water.

Government to build underground barrier

JERUSALEM — Defense officials on Thursday said the government has begun work on a massive underground barrier along the border with Gaza meant to block Hamas militants from tunneling into Israel.

The project is the hallmark of a huge Israeli effort to halt the Hamas tunnels, which military officials have identified as a strategic threat. Hamas terrorists have used underground tunnels to attack Israelis.

During a 2014 war, Hamas militants managed on several occasions to make their way into Israel through their tunnel network, though they did not reach nearby civilian areas.

Israel destroyed at least 32 tunnels during that conflict and has announced the discovery of several more tunnels since then. As a result, the military has invested great efforts in technologies to detect, destroy and block them. Israel has already surrounded Gaza with a sophisticated above-ground fence fortified with sensors, cameras, barbed wire and watch towers.

Lawmakers could have to vacate crumbling Parliament

LONDON — A committee charged with stopping the creaky, leaky Parliament from falling is set to say whether lawmakers will have to move out for several years so repair work can be done.

The Joint Committee on the Palace of Westminster has been studying options for the 19th-century complex, which needs work to repair collapsing roofs, crumbling walls and leaking pipes, and to remove asbestos.

A study by Deloitte Real Estate last year laid out three options, taking between six and 32 years.

The BBC and other media say the committee will back the shortest timeframe, which would see members of the House of Commons and House of Lords move to temporary premises for six years.

ISTANBUL — A senior Turkish official says 11,285 education ministry personnel, including teachers, have been suspended amid suspicions they may be linked to outlawed Kurdish rebels.

The official said Thursday that the personnel were placed on paid leave until authorities can complete a formal investigation.

Speaking to reporters on condition of anonymity in line with government rules, the official didn’t specify what links the personnel may have with the Kurdish rebels.

But he said such steps are taken based on “concrete evidence” including financial ties and efforts to recruit for the rebels.

Monitors report unusual seismic activity in North Korea

Quake’s location near nuclear test site suggests atomic blast

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL — South Korean and international monitoring agencies reported Friday an earthquake near North Korea’s northeastern nuclear test site, a strong indication that Pyongyang had detonated its fifth atomic test explosion.

South Korea’s Joint Chiefs of Staff said in a statement that “artificial seismic waves” measuring 5.0 were detected near the Punggye-ri test site, and officials were analyzing whether it was a nuclear test.

European and U.S. monitoring services also detected similar seismic activity, with the U.S. Geological Survey calling it an “explosion” on its website.

North Korea conducted its fourth nuclear test earlier this year, part of its push for a nuclear-armed missile that could one day reach the U.S. mainland.

A second nuclear test this year would be a defiant response to Western pressure on Pyongyang to halt its nuclear ambitions. The country has previously conducted tests every three to four years.

Any test will lead to a strong push for new, tougher sanctions at the United Nations and further worsen already abysmal relations between Pyongyang and its neighbors. North Korean nuclear tests worry outside governments because they are seen as moving North Korea’s scientists and engineers that much closer to their goal of an arsenal of nuclear-tipped missiles that can reach the United States.

Coal miners march on Capitol to defend pensions

Thousands of retirees call on Senate to pass measure rescuing benefit for 120K

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Thousands of retired coal miners gathered near the U.S. Capitol in 96-degree weather Thursday to push Congress to save a pension fund many of them depend on that could go broke by year's end.

Lawmakers have not reached a deal to salvage the United Mine Workers of America's Health and Retirement Funds.

About 120,000 retired miners depend on the benefit, which averages $530 a month and keeps them from falling into poverty or onto welfare.

"There's a lot of widows and miners in eastern Kentucky that depend on the UMW pension for their health care," said Joseph Hatfield of Pikeville, Ky., the president of the United Mine Workers Union's Local 1511.

Hatfield was one of a group of retired miners who rented a van and drove about eight hours from eastern Kentucky to Washington to participate in the rally. Other miners came in buses from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois, Ohio and Alabama.

Phil Smith, a union spokesman, said that at least 7,500 attended the rally and about 100 of them got arrested by U.S. Capitol Police when they sat down in a parking lot in protest.

A bipartisan group of senators proposes to rescue the pension fund with unused money from a federal mine reclamation fund, but they remain short of the 60 votes needed to move the bill forward.

The Senate version of the Miners Protection Act has the support of 46 Democrats and eight Republicans, according to its lead sponsor, Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va.

In May, Manchin sent a letter to Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., asking for a vote on the bill by the end of the summer.

The Senate Finance Committee would have to approve the bill before it goes to the full Senate, and then the House of Representatives.

Many of the country's biggest coal producers are in bankruptcy and may be able to shed their pension obligations under restructuring, putting pressure on the Capitol Police move in to arrest UMW President Cecil Roberts (center) and about 100 members of the union as they block vehicles in a parking lot along Pennsylvania Avenue.

70-year-old fund.

There are only 10,000 active workers to support 120,000 retirees, and 60 percent of the beneficiaries work for coal companies that are no longer in business. If Congress does not rescue the pension plan, the federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. would assume billions of dollars in liabilities.

Retired miners could see their benefits cut, putting a strain on entire families.

"It affects the bottom line of everyone," said Lynn Quintero of Madisonville, Ky., who attended the rally with her son and her father, Steven Jennings, a retired miner.

Thousands of members of the United Mine Workers of America, including retired miner Bill Rising of Indiana, Pa., gather to call on Congress to pass the Miners Protection Act during a rally Thursday on the National Mall in Washington.

Jennings put in 28 years in the industry and receives about $600 a month.

"We were promised it, and it's time now for them to come vote," he said.

An abundance of cheap, natural gas produced through hydraulic fracturing has eroded coal's dominance in the nation's electricity production. Renewable energy, such as wind and solar, has become cheaper to produce, and the policies of President Obama have promoted its development.

The coal industry and elected officials from coal-producing states have blamed Obama and Environmental Protection Agency regulations for coal's decline.

But sitting in lawn chairs under a group of big trees with good shade, a group of retired miners from Pike County, Ky., said they weren't satisfied with the level of support they were getting from McConnell, their state's most powerful member of Congress.

The United Mine Workers of America endorsed McConnell's 2014 opponent, Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes. McConnell defeated Grimes to win a sixth Senate term, and a turn as the chamber's majority leader.

In December, the Kentucky Republican removed the pension rescue provision from an omnibus spending bill Congress passed.

Afghan rescue bid doesn't find hostages

Taliban surge into southern provincial capital, boast on Twitter of victory

WIRE REPORTS

U.S. special operations forces launched a rescue mission to retrieve two men kidnapped by insurgents in Afghanistan last month, but the hostages were not there when the rescue team arrived, U.S. defense officials said Thursday.

Pentagon press secretary Peter Cook said the rescue mission was approved by Defense Secretary Ash Carter and authorized by the president. Cook said no U.S. personnel or civilians were injured and added that he would not provide any more details "in order to protect the safety of hostages and operational security."

According to defense officials, the mission was delayed one day because of questions about the intelligence and whether the hostages, an American and an Australian who worked at the American University of Afghanistan, were there. Officials would not provide the precise timing or location of the rescue attempt because they said it could jeopardize any possible future operations.

Because of questions about the intelligence — including the degree of confidence in the information that the men were at that location — administration officials did not forward the mission request to President Obama until the next day, officials said. Obama approved the mission, and commandos went out that next night.

The officials said that when commandos arrived at the location, they killed seven enemy fighters. They said that based on interviews with people at the site, it's still not clear if the hostages were ever there.

Meanwhile, hundreds of Taliban stormed a provincial capital in southern Afghanistan and were fighting on multiple fronts with government forces, officials said.

Afghan officials deployed reinforcements to Tirin Kot, in Uruzgan province, and Afghan and U.S.-led NATO warplanes were carrying out airstrikes in an attempt to deter the latest Taliban advance against a strategic city.

One security official in Uruzgan said provincial officials had sought shelter at the local airport, home to an Afghan army brigade, in a sign that the battle was not going the government's way.

"Afghan forces have lost overall control of the whole city," said the official, requesting anonymity because he wasn't authorized to speak to the media.

A Twitter account affiliated with the Taliban boasted that the city "was about to fall" and that its fighters were "combing the streets" of Tirin Kot. In a statement, the militant group called on Afghan security forces to stand down, saying it would "forgive and guarantee the life, property and honor of those who give up fighting."

The police chief in Uruzgan, Mohammad Wais Samimi, said by phone from Tirin Kot: "Our forces have been trying to push back the Taliban as fighting is going on in three parts of the city."

Afghan officials said the powerful police chief of neighboring Kandahar province, Gen. Abdul Razaq, had arrived in Uruzgan with his forces and would help lead "a clearing operation."

Texas sheriff: 1 student dead, 1 hurt in school shooting

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALPINE, Texas — A 14-year-old girl died of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound after shooting and injuring another female student Thursday inside a high school in West Texas, according to the local sheriff.

Authorities haven't released a possible motive for the gunfire that erupted shortly before 9 a.m. at Alpine High School in Alpine, about 220 miles southeast of El Paso. The shooting was followed by a series of unrelated threats made by a male caller that added to the chaos of the day and diverted law enforcement from the high school.

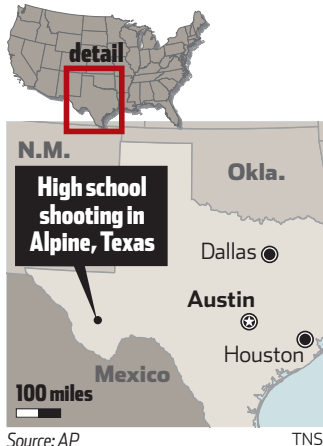

"That's ridiculous for someone to call in something like this when we've got this situation going on," Brewster County Sheriff Ronny Dodson told radio station KVLE.

The sheriff said the family of the girl who died had moved to Alpine, a town of roughly 5,900 residents, about six months ago. She was a freshman at the school, he said, but he declined to provide other details.

Dodson said the injured student ran outside seeking help and was taken to a hospital with injuries that weren't considered life threatening. A Homeland Security officer responding to the shooting also was injured; he was shot in the leg when a U.S. marshal accidentally discharged his weapon, Dodson said.

Big Bend Regional Medical Center spokeswoman Ruth Hucker said the hospital treated two people from the incident. She said one was treated and released, while the other was transferred. Hucker didn't specify which patient was released, but officials said the injured officer was transferred to a hospital in Odessa.

The shooting at the high school prompted a lockdown at Alpine's three public schools, which were later evacuated.

Alpine police Chief Russell Scown said even after the shooter was found mortally wounded in a bathroom at the school, it wasn't immediately clear that she was the assailant.

2 men arrested, charged with hacking senior U.S. officials

CIA chief apparently among targets of network including 3 British teens

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Two North Carolina men were arrested Thursday and charged in connection with a computer hacker network that allegedly targeted CIA Director John Brennan and other senior government officials.

Federal prosecutors in Alexandria said Andrew Otto Boggs, 22, known online as "INCURSIO," of North Wilkesboro, N.C., and Justin Gray Liverman, 24, also known as "D3F4ULT," of Morehead City, N.C., were charged and will make initial appearances next week.

Prosecutors say Boggs and Liverman were members of a hacking group called "Crackas With Attitude." Beginning in October, the hackers gained access to personal online accounts of senior U.S. government officials. The officials are not identified in a 37-page affidavit.

Hispanic growth lowest in 50 years

Low immigration, birth rates part of decline in U.S.

USA TODAY

MIAMI — The Hispanic population living in the United States is growing at the slowest rate since official record-keeping began nearly 50 years ago, according to a report released Thursday.

Hispanics grew by an average of more than 5 percent annually throughout the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s, driving much of the population growth in the country. But according to a new report from the Pew Research Center, that number started falling in 2007 with the Great Recession and continued to slide to a record-low 2.1 percent growth rate in 2014.

Mark Hugo Lopez, director of Hispanic research at Pew and a co-author of the report, said the drop is because of lower levels of legal and illegal immigration to the United States from Mexico and lower birth rates among Hispanics.

"These two together are slowing Hispanic population growth at the national level," Lopez said.

The report comes as immigration and the role of Hispanics in the country continue to play a central role in the presidential election. Republican Donald Trump has focused his campaign on stopping illegal immigration and slowing legal immigration, while Democrat Hillary Clinton has vowed to protect some undocumented immigrants from deportation, trying to maximize her appeal with Hispanic voters.

Lopez said Hispanics continue driving much of the country's growth in recent years, accounting for 54 percent of the nation's population growth since 2000. But as fewer Hispanic immigrants enter the country and more Hispanics settle into their communities, the group is not spreading around the country as widely as it once did.

The share of counties with at least 1,000 Hispanics grew from 27 percent in 1990 to 38 percent in 2000 and 46 percent in 2007, according to the report. Since then, the share of counties with at least 1,000 Hispanics has grown only 4 percent.

Lopez said the counties that remain with small numbers of Hispanics are mostly remote places that don't have job markets to lure large numbers of people, Hispanic or not.

"You're talking about counties in rural Alaska or rural Montana," he said. "Maybe the Latinos have dispersed across all the counties that have economic opportunities for them."

The report also highlighted the rise in immigration from other countries, including China and India. The growth rate of the Asian population in the nation is now higher than that of the Hispanic population. Randy Capps, director of research for U.S. programs at the Washington-based Migration Policy Institute, said that's partly due to the large number of Hispanics in the country that makes it difficult to maintain such a high growth rate.

There are 55 million Hispanics in the country, which represents 17.4 percent of the population. So Capps said it's difficult to imagine that Hispanics could return to the days of 5 percent annual growth.

Mexico's economy has improved, meaning fewer people are immigrating to the United States. There have been recent increases in the number of Puerto Ricans moving to the U.S. mainland to avoid the island's economic woes, plus Central Americans rushing across the southern border fleeing their region's violence. Capps said those increases can't match the volume of Mexicans who came in recent decades.

Trump talks school vouchers

Before detailing $20B education plan, he lashes out at Clinton on foreign policy

WIRE REPORTS

Donald Trump introduced a $20 billion school voucher plan at a charter school in Cleveland on Thursday, hoping to make inroads with the suburban women he needs to catch up with Hillary Clinton. Though the speech was dedicated to education, Trump began his remarks by spending several minutes lambasting Clinton's foreign policy experience and renewing his false claim that he opposed the war in Iraq before it began. "The media is so terribly dishonest," Trump said, criticizing reporters who called him out for repeating the claim that he opposed the war Wednesday during a forum in New York. Trump insisted that he would have voted against the war if he had not been a private citizen and blamed Clinton's policies for unleashing the Islamic State. Trump again called Clinton, who voted for the war as a senator, "trigger-happy," and he called Iraq "one of the biggest differences in this race." Trump's scant public comments before the war began, made to Howard Stern, indicate that he supported the war. Thursday, Trump said he would have voted against the war if he had been serving in Congress at the time. He argued: "I opposed going in. And I opposed the reckless way Hillary Clinton took us out." The Trump education plan would use a block grant — sent to states — to support 11 million poor children. It would encourage states, which largely control education policy and funding, to allow students to enroll in private, charter, magnet or public schools. The brief plan, outlined in a 232-word news release, says the money would come from redirecting existing education dollars, but did not specify which programs would need to be cut. Clinton is supported heavily by teachers unions, which oppose such programs, arguing that they weaken the public education system. Trump endorsed merit pay for teachers, another policy often opposed by unions that support seniority-based pay structures. The issues could have resonance among parents, given that education often ranks as a top concern. "This is the new civil rights agenda of our time," Trump said. "I will use the pulpit of the presidency to campaign for this in all 50 states," Trump said, pledging to support politicians in state and local races who favor school choice. Trump cited Cleveland's voucher program as a model, though a recent study found that the 20,000 students who receive the vouchers performed worse on standardized tests than their public school peers. Meanwhile, Clinton blasted Trump for his condemnation of American military generals and his praise for Russian President Vladimir Putin, saying her Republican opponent had "failed" at proving he can be commander in chief. "Every Republican holding or seeking office in this country should be asked if they agree with Donald Trump about these statements," Clinton said in a news conference the morning after both candidates appeared at a national security forum.

He said the party hasn't done anything to improve his neighborhood. "You ask them what they did locally for us — nothing. There's nothing going on here," he said. Tyrie Lawson, 60, an Italian Ice vendor who set up shop on Frankstown Avenue on Thursday, also had questions. He said he could not comment on Clinton's visit until he hears what the former president has to say, but was curious to know why Hillary Clinton is not appearing. He wanted to know why Clinton didn't come to his neighborhood when he was running or in office. "He didn't come and see about our community," he said. "Our community needs help." Homewood is a predominantly black neighborhood with 35 percent of its families living in poverty, according to 2014 U.S. Census data. Clinton's presence hopefully will mean a commitment to rebuilding the inner city, said

Pittsburgh City Councilman Ricky Burgess, who represents Homewood. "These communities of concentrated poverty deserve to become a priority of the country," he said. "They need disproportionate resources to be transformed from isolated communities of concentrated poverty to mixed-income, self-sustaining communities." Community members who expressed excitement over Bill Clinton's appearance spoke highly of Hillary Clinton's candidacy, saying she has experience in government and is qualified for the presidency. The Benghazi and email controversies did nothing to diminish their support of her, they said. "I think she is extremely qualified as anybody that I've ever read about or known about since FDR," said Stitt. "No other person has her political qualifications. Nobody has been first lady as governor, first lady for the country, the senator, and secretary of the State, on top of that being a brilliant lawyer from the get-go. # Lawmakers plan to contact AOL

POWELL • FROM A1

His exchange with Clinton was released Wednesday by congressional Democrats. Powell wrote to Clinton in January 2009 that he had "a personal computer that was hooked up to a private phone line" so he could communicate with friends and foreign leaders directly "without it going through the State Department servers." Powell warned Clinton in 2009 "there is a real danger" if it were to become known she was using a smartphone to send emails because they could become official government records subject to release under the Freedom of Information Act. Republicans have sought to portray the Democratic presidential nominee's use of a private server to conduct official business as reckless, saying her homebrew email setup probably was targeted by foreign agencies. A yearlong investigation by the FBI focused on whether Clinton sent or received classified information using the private server, which was not authorized for such messages. FBI Director James Comey said in July that his agents didn't find evidence to support any criminal charges or direct evidence that Clinton's private server was hacked. He suggested that hackers working for a foreign government may have been so sophisticated they wouldn't have left behind any evidence of a break-in. In Powell's case, however, it is known that his private email account was breached. In 2012 and 2013, a Romanian hacker known as Guccifer targeted Powell's AOL account, as well as the accounts of former President George W. Bush's sister and dozens of others. The hacker then leaked emails Powell exchanged with a female Romanian diplomat with whom he carried on years of personal correspondence after meeting while he was secretary of State. Powell, who is married, denied having an affair with the woman. The hacker accessed Powell's Facebook account, sending out posts under the former secretary's name stating "You will burn in hell, Bush!" and "Kill the illuminati!" Guccifer, whose real name is Marcel Lazar, was arrested and extradited to the United States. He was sentenced last week to more than four years in federal prison. Meanwhile, lawmakers said they will seek to recover Powell's missing emails from his time as secretary of State by going directly to AOL. The decision was made a few minutes after State Department officials testified in a hearing that the department never contacted AOL to recover the missing records, despite repeated requests by the National Archives and Records Administration over the past year. The hearing, by the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, was the latest in the fallout from Clinton's decision to use an unauthorized private email system for official email while secretary of State. The Democratic Party presidential candidate has said her decision was wrong, but it has continued to dog her effort to defeat Republican rival Donald Trump in the election. "I don't get this; it's ridiculous," said Democrat Stephen Lynch, a committee member. "This is the National Archives asking you to contact AOL, but you didn't do that." Patrick Kennedy, the State Department's senior management official, said Powell never replied to a request to ask AOL to attempt to recover his work emails. "We cannot make a request for someone else's records from their provider," Kennedy said in his testimony. "That request has to be made by them."

and take them into custody as a means to prevent incidents from escalating to more serious assaults and other confrontations with authorities. Without the expanded powers, Nolan suggested officers had no ability to remove violators from a scene if they were cited only for summary crimes. "I can see incidents happening at park festivals when people are drunk, or at the airport when flights get canceled," Nolan said. Solicitor Melissa Guidy said most municipal police officers have arrest powers for summary crimes, but that power was never granted to the park police force. "This just gives them the ability to make arrests without warrants," Guidy said. Nolan said he does not expect the added powers to result in many arrests. Officers last year wrote about 100 summary citations for which fines were issued. Few of those incidents escalated into violent confrontations, he said. "It's just a last option for when someone doesn't want to comply," Nolan said. Rich Cholodofsky is a Tribune-Review staff writer. Reach him at 724-830-6293 or rcholodofsky@tribweb.com.

Marines: Recruit killed himself amid culture of abuse

Parris Island leaders could be punished over hazing

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — A Marine recruit committed suicide in March amid a widespread culture of hazing and abuse in his battalion at Parris Island that could lead to punishments for as many as 20 officers and enlisted leaders, the Marine Corps said Thursday.

Some of those 20 commanders and senior enlisted leaders have already been fired, including the three most senior Marines in charge of the recruit’s unit.

The Marines also ordered that the rest be temporarily relieved, according to a statement. Their punishments could range from administrative punishments, such as counseling, to the most severe action of military charges and a court-martial.

However, that process could take months, and the leaders would not be identified unless they are formally charged.

The findings are the result of three investigations conducted over the past six months by Maj. Gen. James Lukeman from the service’s training and education command. They were undertaken after Raheel Siddiqui, 20, of Taylor, Michigan, died after falling nearly 40 feet in a stairwell.

An attorney for Siddiqui’s family, Nabih Ayad, has said the family has “always suspected hazing of some sort” in connection with his death. He did not return a phone call Thursday.

A redacted investigative report did not mention Siddiqui by name but appeared to describe his death.

It says that on March 18, the day Siddiqui died, an unnamed recruit wrote a note to his drill instructor asking to go to the infirmary for a sore throat. Because he didn’t follow proper procedure, the recruit was forced to run back and forth in his barracks, the report said.

After several runs, the recruit began to cry and fell to the floor clutching his throat, apparently unresponsive, the report said. He was ordered to get up and was slapped in the face, it said. After he was slapped, the recruit ran out a door and vaulted over a railing on the third floor of the barracks, the report said.

The investigation also revealed “re-current physical and verbal abuse of recruits by drill instructors.”

State adds 10 years to ambitious climate change law

LOS ANGELES — Gov. Jerry Brown extended the nation’s most ambitious climate change law Thursday by another 10 years as the state charts a new goal to reduce carbon pollution.

The Democratic governor signed the legislation in a Los Angeles park amid opposition from the oil industry, business groups and Republicans. It expands on California’s landmark 2006 law, which set a target of reducing greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2020.

The state is poised to meet or exceed that benchmark, with steps including restricting the carbon content of gasoline and diesel fuel, encouraging sales of zero-emission vehicles and imposing a tax on pollution, Brown said.

Tourist on honeymoon killed outside hotel

ORLANDO — A Turkish tourist on his honeymoon was killed early Thursday during an armed robbery in front of his wife in the heart of Orlando’s tourist district.

Osman Darcan, 52, died from multiple gunshots fired by a robber who was trying to steal his wife’s purse by their car outside the hotel resort where they were staying, said Orange County Sheriff’s Office Capt. Angelo Nieves.

Darcan was trying to help his wife in a struggle with the robber, who fled without the purse into a waiting car.

It was the first killing of a tourist in Orlando’s tourism district in recent memory, Nieves said. The district around International Drive, or “I-Drive” as locals call it, is among the safest areas in Orlando.

The move comes after an appeals court decided a defunding order from Utah Gov. Gary Herbert was likely an unconstitutional political move designed to punish the group because it provides abortions.

The prohibition signed Sunday by U.S. District Judge Dee Benson in Salt Lake City will be in effect as a court battle over the governor’s order plays out.

Interstate non-cents: Unstamped coins spill

NEW CASTLE — Authorities said a tractor-trailer carrying 45,000 pounds of unstamped pennies overturned on north-bound Interstate 95, spilling its load and jamming traffic.

Delaware State Police Master Cpl. Jeffrey Hale said by telephone that the big rig overturned and caught fire early Thursday at the split for eastbound Interstate 295 in New Castle. Troopers say the driver, 25-year-old Stefan Marinkovic of Chicago, was hospitalized with minor injuries.

Hale says the load of blank metal disks spilled onto the roadway.

Authorities say the blank pennies, which were headed for the Philadelphia Mint, were picked up and stored until transportation can be arranged.

1,200 students kept at school after mercury found

LAS VEGAS — Hundreds of anxious parents staked out a Las Vegas middle school after mercury was found and federal officials kept more than a thousand students for up to 17 hours to screen them for exposure to the neurotoxin.

Authorities were investigating how mercury got into Walter Johnson Junior High School on Wednesday, forcing 1,300 students, teachers and first responders to undergo testing by the Environmental Protection Agency, according to Clark County School District police Capt. Ken Young.

No illnesses have been reported, although the fire department took two adults to the hospital after they suffered unrelated medical episodes while waiting outside the school.

Some parents criticized the lack of information they received and the intensity of the response, but officials said it was important to be sure no one went home contaminated.

Missing flag from famous 9/11 photo returns to Ground Zero

Icon returned to authorities after more than a decade

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — An American flag raised at Ground Zero on Sept. 11 in a defining moment of patriotic resolve took its place at the site Thursday after disappearing for over a decade.

The 3-foot-by-5-foot flag took a symbolic and curious journey from a yacht moored in lower Manhattan to the smoking wreckage of the World Trade Center, then to a firehouse about 2,400 miles away in Everett, Washington — and now to a glass case at the National Sept. 11 Museum. A TV show, a mysterious man and two years of detective work helped re-establish its whereabouts.

“In a museum that’s filled with such deeply powerful artifacts, this newest of artifacts is certainly one of the most emotionally and historically powerful,” museum President Joe Daniels said as the display was unveiled Thursday, three days before the 15th anniversary of the terror attacks.

The flag’s absence, he said, “just felt like a hole in the history of this site.”

The flag is the centerpiece of one of the most resonant images of American fortitude on 9/11. After plucking the flag from a nearby boat, three firefighters hoisted it amid the ashen destruction as photographer Thomas E. Franklin of The Record of Hackensack, N.J., captured the scene. The Pulitzer Prize-winning picture inspired a postage stamp, sculpture and other tributes.

Meanwhile, the flag was signed by New York’s governor and two mayors and flown at Yankee Stadium, outside City Hall and on an aircraft carrier near Afghanistan — except it wasn’t the right flag. It was bigger, and by 2004, the yacht’s owners had publicly broached the error.

By then, officials had no idea what had happened to the real flag.

They were in the dark until November 2014, when a man turned up at an Everett fire station with what is now the museum’s flag, saying he’d seen a recent History channel piece about the mystery, according to Everett Police Detective Mike Atwood and his former colleague Jim Massingale.

The man, who gave firefighters only the name “Brian,” said he’d gotten it as a gift from an unnamed National Atmospheric and Oceanic Administration worker who’d gotten it from an unidentified 9/11 widow.

Crews find, test items in dig for student missing for 20 years

19-year-old disappeared after college party in Calif. in 1996

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. — Investigators digging for the remains of a California college student who vanished 20 years ago uncovered items that were being examined Thursday to see if they were related to her disappearance.

Officials didn’t reveal what they found at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, where 19-year-old Kristin Smart was seen returning to her dormitory from an off-campus party on May 25, 1996.

A male student who said he dropped off Smart near her dorm is considered a person of interest, but he has never been arrested or charged, authorities say.

The ongoing excavation began after a lead emerged through a comprehensive review of the case, Sheriff Ian Parkinson said this week. The two-decade investigation has involved other searches.

The unspecified items found this week were being analyzed to see if they are related to the case, San Luis Obispo County sheriff’s spokesman Tony Cipolla said in an email.

The items were found on a hillside near a large concrete letter “P” that is a landmark of the school, located halfway between San Francisco and Los Angeles. FBI agents and sheriff’s employees began digging there Tuesday.

Two other sites also have been marked for digging, with work already underway at one.

Crews using heavy equipment then rakes and shovels were expected to sift through about 20,000 cubic feet of dirt through Friday.

Arthur Moats, a Steelers linebacker, agreed.

“Player safety is key,” Moats said. “Any time they are trying to make sure the guys are safe and take those extra steps to make sure that happens is always great. I am always in support of that.”

Wilberger didn’t foresee any problems working alongside doctors from UPMC, AHN’s direct competitor.

“Despite the fighting going on between health systems, the physicians aren’t fighting with each other,” Wilberger said. “I would expect everything to be cordial and professional. There aren’t bad relationships between physicians.”

Wilberger has worked as director of the traumatic brain injury program at AGH for more than two decades.

“We are supportive of NFL and NFLPA programs that enhance player safety, including using independent and unaffiliated personnel to aid existing official team physicians throughout the league,” UPMC spokesman Rick Pietzak said in response to the announcement.

Wilberger said he will help evaluate possible head and neck injuries, but team doctors have the final say about whether to allow players to return to football games.

He will consult during games with independent athletic trainer spotters in the press box. The spotters have the ability to call a medical timeout and halt play to have a player receive medical attention if he appears to be disoriented.

A system of fines is in place for NFL teams that fail to properly use the league’s concussion protocol. A first offense results in a $150,000 fine; a second violation results in a $100,000 fine.

If the NFL commissioner determines that a team’s medical personnel failed to follow the concussion protocol, he might force them to forfeit draft picks and impose additional fines exceeding those amounts.

Concussions and hits to the head long have been at the forefront of NFL player safety issues. Bennet Omalu, a former Allegheny County deputy coroner, discovered evidence linking football-related brain injuries to CTE while examining former Pittsburgh Steelers center Mike Webster’s brain after his 2002 death. His story was portrayed last year in the movie “Concussion.”

The Steelers regular season home opener is Sept. 18 against the Cincinnati Bengals. They open the season Monday on the road against the Washington Redskins.

Intervention sought for disabled teen planning to die

Group argues girl’s case should be treated as suicide prevention

WIRE REPORTS

APPLETON, Wis. — Disability rights groups said Thursday they have asked child protective services to intervene in the case of a severely disabled Wisconsin teenager who suffers chronic pain from her disease and wants to die.

Jerika Bolen, 14, who suffers from Type 2 Spinal Muscular Atrophy, garnered widespread attention earlier this year by speaking openly about plans to end her life. Her final wish of a prom dance drew more than 1,000 people in her hometown of Appleton.

Bolen said that because of her severe pain and the degenerative nature of her disease, which has confined her to a wheelchair, she would stop using the ventilator that aids her breathing in September.

Bolen’s mother, Jen, could not be reached for comment, but she told the Appleton Post Crescent in July she had reluctantly accepted her daughter’s decision.

“If she’s at peace with it, I have to find a way to make peace with it,” she said.

However, several disability rights groups have voiced concern, arguing that Bolen’s case should be treated as one of suicide prevention because her disease is not terminal.

They also question the pain management care Bolen has received.

“This is a child protection issue,” said Carrie Ann Lucas, founder of Colorado-based Disabled Parents Rights.

“We’re talking about a 14-year-old child. It’s a difficult time in most people’s lives. She has her whole life in front of her. She should be going to college. She should be having a career.”

AMERICA’S RESPONSE POST-9/11

A disturbing ‘stalemate’

As the nation prepares to observe the 15th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks that claimed nearly 3,000 lives, the co-chairmen of the 9/11 Commission this week issued a grim assessment: America has reached a “stalemate” in the fight against the hardened Islamic adversaries of civilization.

The government replaced one bureaucracy with another one.

Whereas there have been no major attacks on U.S. soil since that horrific morning in America, smaller attacks here and abroad underscore a situation “probably even more dangerous than it was on 9/11” with the rise of ISIS and other extremists, said former New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, a Republican, who, along with former Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., led the national commission that critiqued the government’s failures leading up to that awful day.

America’s multibillion-dollar response, in effect, replaced one ineffectual bureaucracy with another one, both men suggested.

Among its findings the 9/11 Commission exposed the egregious disconnection among federal agencies that stymied intelligence before the attacks. Chief among the panel’s recommendations in 2004 was its call for better congressional oversight, which today remains an afterthought.

“(U)ntil the Congress decides that it’s going to have a single oversight committee for homeland security, and not this panoply of 94 different committees, that’s not oversight. That’s a total lack of oversight,” Mr. Kean said.

Fifteen years later, there’s no room left for excuses.

Laurels & Lances

On the “Watch List”: Drivers’ patience. Road-work and detours in and around Pittsburgh are frustrating enough for daily commuters. For folks who don’t know the city well and who end up “off course” because of a detour or accident, it’s a nightmare of merging into the right lanes at the right time. Take a deep breath and cut ’em some slack.

Lance: The McLay report. Because Pittsburgh police Chief Cameron McLay, in uniform, didn’t mention Hillary Clinton when he spoke at the Democratic National Convention, he didn’t violate any city codes or police policies, according to the Office of Municipal Investigations. And the Democrats’ convention was not a “campaign” event? This festering imbroglio boils down poor judgment — period.

An observation: Whether Excelsa Health’s 2008 purchase of the former Jeannette District Memorial Hospital, since razed, for $13.8 million, turned out to be a “good return” on investment can be disputed. The health care system has sold the vacant site for $820,000 to a company that plans to open a senior citizen assisted-living facility. What isn’t disputable is Excelsa’s responsibility in maintaining the site after closing its outpatient center there in 2011. Such responsibility hasn’t always been the case — to say the least — among some of Jeannette’s larger property owners.

Laurel: To the Palace Theatre’s 90th anniversary. The landmark theater is indeed a cultural treasure in the heart of Greensburg. Here’s to sustaining that pulse for generations to come.

Falling through the cracks

New industrial facilities like the Shell cracker plant may provide jobs but their emissions will exacerbate an existing problem: our unhealthy air.

Now comes the Beaver County Shell cracker plant with its promises of more jobs and economic growth. Powerful carrots. No doubt the new plant will deliver.

But let’s not forget some facts. Southwestern Pennsylvania has some of the worst air in the nation. Nationally, 200,000 people die prematurely each year because of air pollution. This facility will make our air worse, not better, so there’s a trade-off. New industrial facilities like the Shell cracker plant may provide jobs but their emissions will exacerbate an existing problem: our unhealthy air. This may be a good deal if you’re the one who gets the job, but the deal might not look so sweet from the back of an ambulance.

Can we really trust industry to go above and beyond to ensure that our environment gets better with time and not worse? For example, will Shell install a fence-line monitoring system, as they have at other facilities, if they aren’t forced to do so?

I’m not holding my breath. I wish I could.

Trump the protector

The probability is near zero that our next president will be someone other than Hillary Clinton or Donald Trump.

In the evaluation of these two choices, I tried to identify the most fundamental imperative that will influence my vote. For this election, one issue is paramount — security. But there is an inverse relationship between security and freedom. I do not want to relinquish more of my freedom to a government that maintains its power by placating every domestic grievance lobby while foreign enemies plan our demise and mock our military might. Yes, we are still the greatest military power on Earth but great powers are defeated by underestimating the enemy, not the opposite.

Consider what we know about the history of each candidate. Trump will be the president who uses the power of his office to protect Americans and punish our country’s enemies. Clinton will be the president who uses the power of her office to reward her supporters and punish her enemies.

Trump gets my vote.

Corrupt academics & the media

Some are puzzled by the dishonesty, lack of character and sheer stupidity of many people in the media. But seeing as most of them are college graduates, they don’t bear the full blame. They are taught by dishonest and irresponsible academics. Let’s look at it.

“A Clash of Police Policies,” a column by Thomas Sowell, presents some readily available statistics: “Homicide rates among black males went down by 18 percent in the 1940s and by 22 percent in the 1950s. It was in the 1960s, when the ideas of Chief Justice (Earl) Warren and others triumphed, that this long decline in homicide rates among black males reversed and skyrocketed by 89 percent, wiping out all the progress of the previous 20 years.”

Academics and the media blame poverty and discrimination for today’s crime. No one bothers to ask why crime was falling in the 1930s, ’40s and ’50s, when blacks faced far greater poverty and discrimination.

Academics teach that the breakdown of the black family is the legacy of slavery and discrimination. But in 1950, 72 percent of black men and 81 percent of black women had been married. Also, only 17 percent of black children lived in single-parent households; today it’s close to 70 percent.

Every census from 1890 to 1950 showed that black labor force participation rates exceeded those of whites. During the late 1940s, the unemployment rate for black 16- and 17-year-olds was less than that for white teens.

Before 1960, the number of teenage pregnancies had been decreasing; both poverty and dependency were declining; and black income was rising in both absolute and relative terms to white income.

As late as 1965, 75 percent of black children were born to married women. Today over 73 percent of black babies are born to unwed mothers. Again, so much for the “legacy of slavery” argument.

Academics teach that school integration is necessary for black academic excellence. Blacks, their logic implies, cannot achieve academic excellence unless they go out and capture a white kid to sit next to their kids.

Public charter schools, such as those in the Knowledge Is Power Program and Success Academy Charter Schools, are having some successes without race mixing. More than 43,000 families are on waiting lists to get their children into charter schools. But teachers unions are opposed to any alternative to public education and contribute to politicians who place obstacles and restrictions on the expansion of charter schools.

The NAACP, at its 2016 national convention in Cincinnati, voted to support “a moratorium on the proliferation of privately managed charter schools.”

It’s easy to understand why the NAACP is against any alternative to public schools. Many of its members work in public education. However, many of those people do want alternatives for themselves.

In Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, 25 percent of public school teachers send their children to private schools. In Philadelphia, 44 percent of teachers send their children to private schools.

This demonstrates the dishonesty, hypocrisy and arrogance of the elite. They effectively say, “One thing for thee and another for me.”

Colorado’s anti-fracking crackup

If a pair of extreme green ballot measures fall in the Rocky Mountains and no one in the liberal media is paying attention, does the collapse make a sound?

Last week, two anti-fracking initiatives backed by deep-pocketed environmental lobbying heavyweights, such as the Sierra Club and Greenpeace, failed to gather enough signatures. The more draconian of the efforts, Initiative 78, would have imposed a mandatory 2,500-foot setback around all oil and gas operations — essentially halting drilling in upward of 95 percent of Colorado’s energy-rich land area.

These drastic attempts to sabotage the oil and gas industry didn’t just miss by inches. They missed by a mile high and wide.

Colorado Secretary of State Wayne Williams announced that supporters of the two measures surpassed the required signature threshold but not by enough to compensate for the number of signatures that were rejected during a random sampling. One of the initiatives garnered 77,000 signatures out of about 98,000 needed to qualify for the ballot; the other, 79,000. Every other state initiative campaign (on issues ranging from primary election reform to cigarette taxes to assisted suicide) this year hit the mark.

Worse for eco-activists, the secretary of State reported that the petition for the de facto fracking moratorium included “several potentially forged signature lines” and has been referred to the state attorney general for investigation.

Despite massive funding from such dark-money donors as billionaire hedge fund manager turned climate change warrior Tom Steyer, the big green propaganda machine keeps coming up short. The enviros failed to gather enough signatures for a similar measure two years ago. Skittish Democrats, including Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper, have distanced themselves from the eco-radicals as the energy sector generates thousands of jobs and billions of dollars for the state economy.

One thing the anti-frackers have been successful at: manufacturing self-serving excuses for their failures. They complained that their allies didn’t spend enough on them. They carped that their opponents spent too much on opposing them.

And they pouted when their phony attempt to con reporters into believing that their measures would get on the ballot blew up in their faces three weeks ago. A day after volunteers paraded into the secretary of State’s office with dozens of boxes of signatures, an official noted that a large number of the boxes were half-full.

Hypocritical save-the-planet soldiers who bemoan our dependence on foreign oil are hellbent on strangling the fracking revolution, which has doubled domestic U.S. oil output and helped drive gas prices down.

Here’s what the job-killing fractivists just won’t admit: Coloradans like their thriving energy sector — and they want to keep it.

Is Hillary Clinton paying attention? She has vowed to her lefty voter base that despite reaping big bucks from fossil fuel campaign finance bundlers, she will ensure that there are not “many places in America where fracking will continue to take place.” It’s as clear a threat as President Barack Obama’s campaign vow to make electricity rates “skyrocket.”

Let’s hope that as the anti-fracking crackup goes in the Rockies, so goes the nation.

Hawaii offers recovery plan to combat coral bleaching

Limits on fishing and polluted runoff possible

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANEEOHE, Hawaii — Hawaii officials Thursday proposed a series of steps to fight coral bleaching that's threatening the state's reefs, including new marine protected areas, limits on fishing and controlling polluted runoff from land.

Hawaii's ocean temperatures have been rising as greenhouse gases in the atmosphere have increased, forcing corals to expel algae they rely on for food. Vast stretches of reef have turned white over the past two summers, increasing the risk that the coral will get sick and die. Some already have died.

It's a serious concern for the health of the ocean because coral reefs provide habitat for fish and other marine life, scientists say. Severe or concurrent years of bleaching can kill coral reefs, as has been documented over the past two years in oceans around the world. Scientists expect a third year of bleaching to last through the end of 2016.

Bruce Anderson, the state Division of Aquatic Resources administrator, said addressing polluted runoff is difficult, noting it would cost millions of dollars to create artificial wetlands that would help control runoff. Fishermen in the past have also resisted moves to limit their catch.

But Anderson said the coral bleaching crisis presents an opportunity.

"We are going to have future bleaching events, and the water is going to get warmer. And it's going to happen again and again," he said. "So our challenge is to prevent the impacts of bleaching as much as we can and also to help the reefs recover."

Another idea is to ban lay gill nets that fishermen leave in the water. Anderson said these types of nets are harmful because they kill all the fish caught in them, not just the species targeted by the fisherman. The nets work because the mesh is large enough for a fish's head to go through but too small for its body to escape.

The state will hold public meetings on its proposals before any are adopted.

Anderson said the state came up with the proposals after surveying over 80 scientists around the world about what steps are most effective at helping coral reefs.

NASA spacecraft on way to asteroid

Osiris-Rex's mission is to grab samples of ancient space rock

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The first NASA explorer of its kind took off on a seven-year quest Thursday, chasing a big, black, unexplored asteroid to gather a few handfuls of gravel for return to Earth.

These bite-size bits of ancient space rock from asteroid Bennu could hold clues to the origin of life, not just on our planet but potentially elsewhere in the solar system.

Thousands gathered to witness the evening launch of Osiris-Rex, a robotic hunter that looks something like a bird with its solar wings. The spacecraft took flight atop an Atlas V rocket, which soared a little before sunset on the mission, a first for the United States.

A United Launch Alliance Atlas V rocket carrying the Osiris-Rex spacecraft lifts off from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station on Thursday, on a two-year journey to asteroid Bennu.

Round trip, the SUV-sized spacecraft will travel more than 4 billion miles by mission's end in 2023.

It will take two years for Osiris-Rex to reach Bennu, which is circling the sun in a slightly wider orbit than Earth's. The boxy spacecraft will go into orbit around across and taller than the Empire State Building — is believed to harbor carbon dating back 4.5 billion years, to the beginning of our solar system. That makes it a time capsule and a scientific prize.

"We will make discoveries on this mission that we have not anticipated. It's exciting!" said Bill Nye, "The Science Guy," chief executive officer of the Planetary Society.

The launch occurred 50 years to the day that the first "Star Trek" episode aired on TV. NASA launch commentator Mike Currie, referenced the anniversary, urging the spacecraft at liftoff "to boldly go" to the asteroid and back.

Osiris-Rex may lead to asteroid-mining missions, according to scientists, and could help protect the planet one day from menacing space rocks.

KQV POLL

Thursday's question

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton said Monday she was really concerned about recent reports and other indications that the Russians might be trying to interfere with the White House race. Clinton cited official assessments that Russian intelligence services were behind the recent cyberattacks of computers at the Democratic National Committee while pointing out that Donald Trump vowed, if elected, to pull out of NATO and has praised the leadership of Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Do you share Clinton's concern for possible undue influence by Russia in this year's presidential election?

Yes: 456 (25 percent)
No: 1,354 (75 percent)

KQV runs two polls simultaneously, one from Internet users, the other from telephone callers. The non-scientific polls often do not reflect the same results.

Friday's question

State Auditor General Eugene DePasquale, in an audit of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, found an increase of toll violations more than 726,000 in 2015 with over $43 million uncollected. Noting that despite extensive efforts, the Commission lacks the authority to deter drivers from skipping out on tolls and fees. DePasquale recommends the General Assembly provide PennDOT the authority to suspend Pennsylvania vehicles' registration until outstanding tolls and fees are paid by the violators and then a reciprocity agreement with surrounding states could be developed.

Should PennDOT be given the authority to suspend the vehicle registrations of chronic toll violators?

Yes: Call 412-333-9190
No: Call 412-333-9192

The final results can be heard on KQV-AM (1410) at 6:58 p.m.

Organizers of annual PA Hero Walk fined $3K

BY JODI WEIGAND

The organization that holds the annual PA Hero Walk had to pay the state a $3,000 fine for not being properly registered as a charity in the commonwealth. Since its inception, the Kiski Valley Veterans and Patriots Association hadn't been registered with the Department of State's Bureau of Corporations and Charitable Organizations, according to a consent agreement and order issued Aug. 9. All organizations that solicit funds must register with the BOC. The nonprofit paid the fine and is now registered as required, a Department of State spokeswoman said. Founder Al Pulice, of Murrysville, said that when they founded the organization and registered as a 501(c)3 nonprofit they weren't aware they had to register with the state BOC. The group organizes the annual PA Hero Walk — a 14-day, 320-mile trek from Philadelphia to Lower Burrell to raise awareness and money for veterans in need. "We were crossing the state one year, and I guess someone called and asked if we were registered," he said. The nonprofit hired a certified public accountant in 2013 to do a financial review, but the BOC rejected their registration application because the CPA wasn't certified to do a financial review, Pulice said. They hired a second CPA to do the review and an audit, but by then it was 2015. "It would have been so simple in the beginning if someone would have told us," Pulice said. "Now we're registered and all is good. "We have nothing to hide, and we're operating as normal." According to the order, the Kiski Valley Veterans and Patriots Association admitted that it provided incomplete and inaccurate registration documents when notified in 2013 of the requirement to register with the bureau. The organization has been registered as a nonprofit with the IRS since 2007 and a domestic nonprofit in the state since 2008, according to the consent order. The state says the group should have been registered with the Bureau since 2007, or at the very least, registered within 30 days of receiving more than $25,000 in donations in 2009. The PA Hero Walk has raised $1.5 million since it was founded, according to the nonprofit's website. Pulice said at the end of this year's Hero Walk that it had been one of their most successful walks to date — raising half of their $200,000 annual goal. In the early years, the PA Hero Walk raised money for the Wounded Warrior Project. Since 2014, the event has raised money solely for Pennsylvania veterans. The group focuses on helping individual veterans that need aid with housing, food and clothing as well as appliance and auto purchases and utility payments.

$22K from drug busts to fund police software

Greensburg detectives will be able to unlock cellphones, automate evidence system

BY JACOB TIERNEY

Greensburg Police Department will use $22,370 seized from drug dealers to buy software to help officers decrypt cellphones and organize evidence. The Westmoreland County District Attorney's office approved the grant, which comes from a fund of drug money seized by local police departments. Greensburg City Council will vote next week on whether to approve the purchases. The city police department plans to use the grant to buy a software program called UFED 4PC, which lets detectives unlock cellphones and decrypt the data on them. "We have one now we use, but the way technology changes in phones, you can imagine it's constantly changing. This is kind of the newest and best thing out there," Chief Chad Zucco said. Zucco and District Attorney John Peck said they didn't know of any other local agencies that have this program. Greensburg will use the software not only for its own investigations, but to help other departments that need to extract data from a cellphone, Zucco said. "Cellphone analysis has become increasingly important in drug investigations. Often, suspects are communicating with co-conspirators about their crimes," Peck said.

"Cellphone analysis has become increasingly important in drug investigations. Often, suspects are communicating with co-conspirators about their crimes."

According to marketing materials for UFED 4PC, it is capable of unlocking many Android devices and extracting data from all types of cellphones. Greensburg will also use the grant money to buy an evidence management program, PMI Evidence Tracker. This is a much-needed improvement to the department's outdated system, Zucco said. "We have three evidence rooms in here that are pretty much filled up," he said. The department tracks evidence by manually punching the information on each piece into a computer system, updating it as required. PMI Evidence Tracker will let the department switch to a barcode-based system that will automate much of the process, Zucco said. When drug dealers are arrested and their money or property is seized by local law enforcement agencies, it goes into a special fund controlled by the district attorney's office. This money can only be disbursed to fund drug enforcement work. The grant to Greensburg is the county's largest cash disbursement this year, according to Peck. His office previously donated $10,000 to Ligonier and $15,000 to Penn Township. Both grants were used to buy and train dogs for K-9 units. The office also gave Penn Township Police Department a car that was seized during a drug investigation.

Festival to focus on parks, heroes

Hempfield Community Days to feature crafters, vendors, 9/11 ceremony

BY JACOB TIERNEY

Hempfield Community Days will put a spotlight on township parks and first responders when it returns for its 18th year this weekend. Officials are preparing Hempfield Park for more than 100 crafters, vendors and exhibitors that attend the annual celebration. "All the things the community enjoys are going to be there," said Doug Weimer, chairman of the township board. The township will hold a 9/11 first responders recognition ceremony Sunday to mark the 15th anniversary of the terrorist attacks. One new activity — "Hempfield's Next Top Dog" contest — risked cancellation because of a lack of entrants, but the show will go on, according to recreation director Jason Winters. "I'd hate to cancel something because of a lack of participation," he said. The show had only three contestants as of Thursday afternoon, but Winters said people can register their dogs up to the last-minute by calling the parks and recreation office at 724-834-7232. The dog show and several other events were planned as fundraisers for the new parks fund. The fund will contribute toward the $5 million in park renovations the township has planned for the next few years. "Now that we're starting to get some of these projects off

Speedway project passes hurdle

Convenience store officials, county judge must give OK to end appeals delaying development

BY JEFF HIMLER

Unity supervisors Thursday approved an agreement and consent order that could clear the way for development of a Speedway convenience store at Route 30 and Village Drive, near The Inn at Mountainview. If Speedway officials and Westmoreland County Judge Richard McCormick sign off on the agreement, it would end court appeals related to the development that has been in the planning stages since 2013. Township Solicitor Gary Falatovich said Speedway "bent over backward" to address township concerns, with a key concession being the elimination of two diesel pumps that would have fueled tractor-trailers at the business. "It is as good as it can get, if not better," supervisors Chairman Michael O'Barto said of the revised design for the store. "The community came together and voiced their concerns to make it better." Residents had raised safety objections to large trucks driving onto side roads near the intersection. Falatovich explained the rear of the property will be graded so that lighting will not be visible from Frye Farm Road. Also, the store and pillars surrounding 16 standard gasoline pumps will feature a brick and stone facade, and a sign facing Route 30 is to include the wording "Welcome to Mountain View, Unity Township" in an antique lettering reminiscent of the signage for the former Mountain View Inn at the site. The landscaping plan for the property includes outdoor seating and a walking trail leading from Frye Farm Road in the vicinity of the Arnold Palmer Cancer Center. Falatovich noted the developer still must obtain township zoning hearing board approval of the signage and county and PennDOT approval of access points along Village Road and widening of the road to include a left-turn lane.

CCAC reaches out to students from ITT Tech

School will consider opening more courses if enough pupils enroll amid abrupt closure

BY ELIZABETH BEHRMAN

Community College of Allegheny County announced Thursday it will work with ITT Technical Institute students who want to transfer because they were left in limbo this week as the for-profit college abruptly closed.

CCAC Provost Stuart Blacklaw said he hopes the college can accommodate as many students as possible and expects to be able to transfer most of their credits.

“We do it all the time,” he said.

ITT Tech, which operated more than 130 campuses nationwide, shut down Tuesday following a demand from the U.S. Department of Education that the company produce an additional $153 million in collateral — nearly double its $78 million in cash on hand — to cover possible losses that the government might incur if the company failed.

The closure stranded about 40,000 students across the country, including about 300 who were enrolled at the ITT Tech campuses at the Pittsburgh Mills mall in Frazer and on Campbells Run Road in Robinson.

“There’s an awful lot of students that are now just left hanging,” Blacklaw said. “We figured we could wait until next semester and just hope they show up (here), but we wanted to be more proactive about reaching out.”

Some of the CCAC classes are already in session for the semester, but Blacklaw said others will start in October.

The school will consider opening more courses next month if enough ITT Tech students enroll and need certain credits.

If you go

Information sessions will be held at two CCAC campuses for ITT Tech students interested in transferring.

Where: Foerster Student Services Center (Allegheny Campus)

When: 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sept. 15 from and 6 to 8 p.m. Sept. 20.

West Hills Center
When: 6 to 8 p.m. on Sept. 13, Sept. 21 and Oct. 4

More info: ITT Tech students can also contact an adviser to discuss the move. Students can reach the admissions office at the Allegheny campus at 412-237-2511 or the North campus at 412-329-3600.

ITT Tech offered courses on a quarterly system while CCAC offers them by semester, so the school will evaluate how to incorporate the students’ credits, Blacklaw said.

“It depends on what their needs are,” he said. “We’re going to have to get them in a room and talk to them about that.”

Butler County Community College is working to accommodate ITT Tech students, specifically those who were enrolled at the campus in Youngstown, Ohio. The school will hold information sessions at 6 p.m. Sept. 19 at Lawrence Crossing and 6 p.m. Sept. 20 at Linden Pointe about enrolling at the community college locations in New Castle and Hermitage, respectively.

State police in Indiana are questioning a suspect in connection with a shooting near the campus of Indiana University of Pennsylvania Thursday afternoon.

No one was injured in the shooting, which is still under investigation, according to Trooper Cliff Greenfield, public information officer for the Indiana barracks. He said one shot was fired in the incident and an adult male suspect was apprehended in the parking lot of the nearby Southtowne Plaza shopping center in White.

The shooting occurred in the office of the Westgate off-campus apartment building about 4 p.m., according to alerts sent to IUP students via Twitter.

About 4:30 p.m., the university sent out a second alert that state police had a suspect in custody.

IUP officials said no students were involved in the shooting.

Man gets probation for making false Homeland Security claims

A former federal agent will spend 30 months on probation for sending an email to the Department of Homeland Security falsely claiming two other agents had said they planned to shoot up their workplaces, a federal judge ruled Wednesday.

Michael R. Cataldo, 43, of Jeannette pleaded guilty in May to making a false statement. U.S. District Judge Mark Hornak also fined Cataldo $1,000.

An Immigration and Customs Enforcement agent, Cataldo created a new email address and sent the email on July 17, 2015, implicating a fellow customs agent and a Transportation Security Administration officer, prosecutors say.

Cataldo was suffering from several untreated mental health problems and had been relieved of his firearm and his law enforcement credentials because of his increasingly erratic behavior, his lawyer, Douglas Sughrue, said in court documents. Cataldo now works as a mason and is receiving treatment, Sughrue said.

Perry Traditional Academy student shot in hip

4 detained in incident near Observatory Hill school

BY MEGAN GUZA

Perry Traditional Academy Principal Dennis Chakey didn't know when he went outside to break up a fight before classes Thursday that he'd be helping a gunshot victim.

He still didn't know as he walked the 17-year-old boy into the school after breaking up a fight and clearing the streets of Perry students. It wasn't until after everyone was inside that officials realized the teen was shot, he said.

"Then it was just all hands on deck," Chakey said.

The incident began just before 8 a.m. with a gunshot, police said. The teenager, a Perry student, was shot in the hip near the intersection of Baytree Street and Perrysville Avenue in Pittsburgh's Observatory Hill neighborhood.

Chakey said he and other staff noticed a group of teens fighting in the street outside the school. As they were monitoring the situation from the school's camera room, other staff members reported the gunshot.

"After the gunshot, the fight on the street stopped, and the people kind of split up," Chakey said. "At that point, we just wanted to get all the kids back inside."

The victim, whom police have not identified, was inside the school by about 8:05 a.m., according to Public Safety spokeswoman Emily Schaffer.

Chakey said staff and the school nurse immediately began tending to the injured student—laying him down, getting him water, comforting him and grabbing shirts to help clean up blood and stop the bleeding.

"There was a lot of good that came out of (the incident) because of the staff here," he said. Paramedics arrived quickly, he said. The teen was taken to Allegheny General Hospital in serious condition.

Schaffer said three male juveniles ran from the scene. Police caught two of them about 8:15 a.m. The third kept running but was caught a short while later. A fourth also was detained for questioning.

All are Perry students, Pittsburgh Public Schools spokeswoman Ebony Pugh said.

A firearm was found on city steps near Waldorf and Grizzella streets, Schaffer said. It wasn't clear whether it was the weapon used in the shooting.

The shooting prompted the school to go immediately into lockdown, Pugh said. The full lockdown was lifted shortly after 9 a.m.

"Everyone did a tremendous job," Chakey said.

As a precaution, however, school officials planned to have increased security in the morning and at dismissal Friday. Friday night's City League football game against Westinghouse was rescheduled to 3:30 p.m., and no fans will be admitted.

Iceoplex at Southpointe owner convicted for 16 tax incidents

Jury acquits operator of Washington County venue of other charges

BY BRIAN BOWLING

The owner of the Iceoplex at Southpointe willfully failed to pay quarterly payroll taxes 16 times since 2012, a federal jury decided Thursday.

The jury acquitted Steven J. Lynch, 61, of Squirrel Hill on 11 other counts of willfully failing to pay quarterly taxes and acquitted him on a charge of obstructing the Internal Revenue Service.

U.S. District Judge Arthur Schwab scheduled Lynch's sentencing for Jan. 11. He remains free on a $100,000 bond.

Lynch owes more than $1.5 million in taxes that he withheld from employees' paychecks without turning the money over to the government, Jeffrey Bender, an attorney for the Justice Department's Tax Division, said in his opening statement.

Lynch never denied he owed the taxes and was making a good-faith effort to pay them, said his lawyer, Robert Barnes. Consequently, it's hard to understand a split verdict that implies he was making a good-faith effort to pay some taxes and not others.

"It makes no sense to say that he suddenly wasn't behaving in good faith," Barnes said.

A former federal prosecutor, Barnes said that in most cases like these, the owner is pocketing the tax dollars. In this case, the Iceoplex wasn't making enough money to cover expenses and Lynch put his personal money into the business to keep it going, he said.

In 2010, an IRS official told Lynch he should declare bankruptcy and walk away from the Iceoplex. Instead, he tried to keep it open with more than 120 people employed, Barnes said.

"Steve did everything he could," he said.

Former Penguins owner Howard Baldwin built the Iceoplex in 1995 as the team's training facility. Lynch and other investors bought the 65,000-square-foot facility for $5 million.

The facility's financial troubles include the National Hockey League lockout in 2004 that killed an entire season, the Great Recession that started about 2008 and the Penguins moving last year to a new practice facility in Cranberry.

The Iceoplex offers a wide range of sporting classes and hosts adult and high school indoor soccer leagues, youth hockey leagues and a volleyball league, according to its website. It rents meeting spaces ranging in size from birthday parties to trade shows.

Mary Nauman was a talented saleswoman and model, but no job meant as much to her as being a wife and mother, her children said.

"She put everything into raising her family. That was number one to her," said daughter, Lisa Warren. "Raising her children to be respectful, to have faith, (to) love one another — that was everything."

An excellent cook, Mrs. Nauman was famous for her paper-thin cut-out cookies — a favorite of her grandchildren — that she decorated with sprinkles every Christmas.

"She'd get them so thin — none of us could ever do that," Warren said. "And they'd be really buttery."

Mary L. Nauman of Greensburg died Tuesday, Sept. 6, 2016, of congestive heart failure. She was 87.

After graduating from Brentwood High School, Mrs. Nauman began training at Horne's Department Store to be a fashion consultant. She went on to model its clothes.

"Mom was really good with people," said her son, Bill Nauman. "She had a very good disposition. From a retail perspective, she made people feel comfortable. That was just a gift that she had."

After she and the late William P. Nauman married and started their family, Mrs. Nauman took a hiatus from working and modeling, but it was a profession to which she returned after the couple's children were grown.

After her husband had his larynx removed because of cancer, the couple did anti-smoking programs in schools. In everything, they were a team, Bill Nauman said.

"I saw a mother and father in love, who loved raising their family," Bill Nauman said, recalling how they used to dance to Tony Bennett and Frank Sinatra songs in their kitchen.

"They had the best love affair you can ever imagine," added Warren.

Fashionable and always classy, Mrs. Nauman returned to retail and modeling in her 50s and 60s, this time at Pross, an upscale women's fashion boutique in Westmoreland Mall.

to put the clothes on ... and show someone the way it should look," Bill Nauman said.

Mrs. Nauman was preceded in death by her husband; her first child, Deborah Ann Nauman; and a brother, Robert Lahm.

In addition to her son and daughter, she is survived by daughters, Maribeth Coleman and Patti Liebegott; and 12 grandchildren.

‘Midnight’ star rode book fame into film

The Lady Chablis blazed path for transgender people in '90s with blunt honesty, courage

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAVANNAH, Ga. — The Lady Chablis, the transgender performer who became an unlikely celebrity for her role in the 1994 best-seller “Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil,” died Thursday in Savannah. She was 59.

Chablis’ sister, Cynthia Ponder, confirmed she died at Candler Hospital. A close friend, Cale Hall, said Chablis died from pneumonia and had been in the hospital for the past month.

A modern, nonfiction take on Southern Gothic storytelling, author John Berendt’s “Midnight” thrust Savannah into the pop-culture spotlight. And the sassy, blunt-spoken Chablis rode the book’s popularity to a level of fame that was rare for transgender performers at the time.

“The legacy that she wanted to leave was one of ‘believe in who you are and never let the world change who you are,’” Ponder said. “Love yourself first and respect yourself first and others will love and respect you.”

Chablis insisted on playing herself in the 1997 “Midnight” movie directed by Clint Eastwood. That same year, she published an autobiography, “Hiding My Candy.”

Berendt’s book had no shortage of quirky, true-life characters — a voodoo priestess, a man who tied live flies to his lapels and a piano player with an encyclopedic command of 6,000 songs.

The Lady Chablis twirls for the crowd awaiting the stars of the movie “Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil” in 1997.

Chablis was easily the most popular, Berendt said Thursday.

“She’s the one that people asked me about most often,” Berendt said. “At that time, transsexuals weren’t that well known and weren’t that well understood. There weren’t that many in show business. And she was one of the first to be accepted by a wider audience.”

Her birth name was Benjamin Edward Knox, but she legally changed it to The Lady Chablis around the time of the “Midnight” movie, said Hall, who knew Chablis since the 1980s.

In his book, Berendt describes first meeting Chablis as she left a doctor’s office following her latest estrogen injection. “Her big eyes sparkled. Her skin glowed. A broken incisor tooth punctuated her smile and gave her a naughty look.”

Chablis tells Berendt she’s a show-girl. She describes her act and reveals the origin of her name.

“I dance, I do lip sync, and I emcee,” Chablis says in “Midnight.” “(Expletive) like that. My mama got the name Chablis off a wine bottle. She didn’t think it up for me though. It was supposed to be for my sister.”

Chablis had performed at Club One in downtown Savannah since its opening day in 1988, said Hall, the nightclub’s co-owner. When “Midnight” mania hit in the 1990s, her act became a popular draw for tourists lured to the Georgia coast by Berendt’s book.

Hall said Chablis gave her final performance at the nightclub on Aug. 6, right before she was hospitalized with pneumonia.

“She was a breakout star, no doubt about it,” Hall said. “I think it was the pure honesty she gave people. She didn’t hold her tongue. She told you what she thought.”

Berendt also noted that although Chablis could be playful and humorous, “she had a very tough inner core.”

“She would always say, ‘Don’t be fooled by this dress I’m wearing,’” Berendt said. “When Clint Eastwood announced he was doing the movie, Chablis made an announcement of her own. She said, ‘If I’m not cast as myself in that movie, there won’t be a movie.’ So he cast Chablis as Chablis.”

DEATHS ELSEWHERE

Johan Botha

VIENNA — Tenor Johan Botha, who dazzled audiences at the world’s top operatic stages in a wide range of roles, died Thursday in Vienna. He was 51. Elisabeth Hartl of Medea Music and Entertainment Group, which worked with Botha, gave no details in announcing his death, but Botha had been suffering from cancer.

Botha

Whereas many of his contemporaries focused on a relatively narrow repertoire, the South African felt at home in operas ranging from Puccini to Wagner. Over his 27-year career, he appeared on most of the world’s top stages, including La Scala, the Royal Opera House Covent Garden, New York’s Metropolitan Opera and the State Opera in Vienna, where he made his home.

Uncommonly versatile, his roles ranged from Florestan in Beethoven’s Fidelio to main characters in operas composed by Verdi, Wagner and Richard Strauss. His voice was light but powerful, displaying a fluidity that at its best knew few constraints.

He was also an accomplished concert singer, appearing with orchestras including the Vienna Philharmonic and Berlin Philharmonic, the London Symphony Orchestra and the Cleveland Orchestra under the batons of Claudio Abbado, Daniel Barenboim and Christian Thielemann among others.

John Hostetter

NEW YORK — John Hostetter, an actor, painter and musician best known for playing the steady stage manager in “Murphy Brown,” has died.

Hostetter died Sept. 2 of complications resulting from a long battle with cancer, his wife, Del Appleby, told The Associated Press on Thursday. Hostetter was 69 and died in a hospice in Port Orange, Fla.

A New York City native who studied drama at Cornell University, Hostetter was an experienced stage actor who later appeared in dozens of films and television programs. Besides “Murphy Brown,” his credits included “Matlock,” “Family Ties” and “The Golden Girls.” In recent years, he also recorded several albums, painted and ran an art gallery.

the ground, it will be nice to have some community involvement,” Winters said.

Each event will raise money for a different aspect of the renovation. For example, the dog show will raise money for a dog park, while “horse patty bingo” will raise money for a handicapped-accessible playground. “Instead of just saying, ‘We’re raising money,’ we’re trying to say, ‘We’re raising money for something,’ ” Winters said.

Winters said an experienced group of staff and volunteers are helping preparations go smoothly.

The festivities begin Saturday at noon, kicking off with the Superhero Family Fun Walk to benefit CASA of Westmoreland. Saturday will also feature a cornhole tournament at 2 p.m. and hotdog eating contest at 6 p.m.

The show continues Sunday from noon to 5 p.m., with a car show starting at 1 p.m.

Mascots will make appearances throughout the weekend at the Kids Zone, which will feature activities for children and crafts.

“As always, we’re looking forward to a great event in our community that will showcase our park and all the great amenities that are there,” Weimer said.

Wimmerton subdivision denied

The supervisors unanimously denied final approval of a subdivision that would have added 32 housing units and two public roads in the proposed third phase of development at the Wimmerton Place residential plan off Route 30.

The township planning commission had recommended approval subject to several conditions — including that the Latrobe Municipal Authority would approve a plan for supplying adequate water for residents.

But, referring to complaints about inadequate water pressure for existing Wimmerton homes, O’Barto said, “I don’t want to make a situation that’s not good any worse.”

Lloydsville fire Chief Brian Schultheis recently expressed concern that there is not enough pressure in the development’s water system to provide adequate fire protection for the existing homes.

Wimmerton residents who attended Thursday’s meeting said they didn’t want to interfere with the plans of the developer, Pellis-Rugh Partnership, for the housing expansion. But they reported problems with frequent power outages that disabled a pump that provides water to the plan.

Chuck Kuchta, secretary-treasurer of the Wimmerton Place Association, said power to the development had gone out at least eight times over the past year and a half.

“The power company comes and has to go to just about every transformer in the plan to find out which fuse blew and then replace it,” resident Chuck Geis said.

O’Barto said the supervisors would try to put residents in touch with the correct officials to address the power complaints.

Falatovich noted the township has no jurisdiction over the electrical system other than its effect on operation of the pump and fire protection for the homes.

Township engineer Dan Schmitt, whose firm also represents the Latrobe Municipal Authority, noted the authority is looking to replace the 1970s-era water pump with an updated version that would include a backup power generator.

But he said the new pump still would not provide adequate pressure for fire protection. He said the Latrobe authority is considering options for increasing the pressure, including possible construction of a water tower.

Meeting planned

Falatovich announced the supervisors will hold a joint meeting with the Unity Township Municipal Authority at 3 p.m. Sept. 21 to explain their disapproval of a revised Act 537 sewage facilities plan presented by the Latrobe authority. According to Falatovich, township officials felt the document didn’t properly reflect a recent state consent order covering a plan for reducing stormwater overflows into the Latrobe sewage treatment plant and assigning related costs among customers in Latrobe and Unity and Derry townships who are served by the plant.

O’Barto won’t seek re-election

O’Barto, who will complete his fourth six-year term as a supervisor next year, announced he is not planning to run again for the office because he wants to seek a seat on the Greater Latrobe School Board.

Fines expected over guns at airport

Ohioans with permits had loaded pistols in bags, authority says

BY MICHAEL WALTON

Security screeners at Pittsburgh International Airport found two loaded handguns in passenger carry-ons as they moved through security during a 34-hour period last week.

Neither passenger was arrested, but both will face civil fines, officials said.

The first firearm was discovered about 9 a.m. Sept. 1,

Transportation Security Administration officials said. TSA agents spotted a .380-caliber pistol inside the carry-on luggage of a man headed to Chicago. The handgun was loaded and had a bullet in the chamber.

The passenger, 51, of Boardman, Ohio, had a concealed carry permit from his home state. He told Allegheny County police he forgot the weapon was in his luggage, Allegheny County Airport Authority spokesman Bob Kerlik said.

Pennsylvania recognizes carry permits issued in Ohio, according to the Ohio

Attorney General’s website.

The second pistol — a loaded .40-caliber Glock — was discovered inside a different man’s carry-on bag at about 7 p.m. on Sept. 2.

That passenger, 44, of Canton, Ohio, also had a concealed carry permit from his home state and was traveling to Chicago. He told police he was in a hurry to pack and forgot the gun was in his bag, Kerlik said.

Police turned both firearms over to the FBI and released the passengers, Kerlik said.

Airbnb apologizes, addresses racism complaints

Company outlines steps to protect users from discrimination

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Airbnb on Thursday apologized for its slow response to accusations of racism and outlined new policies to combat the problem, including reducing the prominence of photos in the booking process.

The company also plans to automatically block future reservations for dates when a host has told someone that a property is unavailable.

Numerous anecdotes on social media with the hashtag #AirbnbWhileBlack recounted incidents in which black guests were told listings were unavailable for the dates they wanted, only to see those same listings re-advertised for the same dates.

“We have been slow to address these problems, and for this I am sorry,” said Airbnb co-founder and CEO Brian Chesky in a message published on the vacation rental website’s blog.

The new calendar-blocking policy, being implemented in the first half of 2017, is designed to stop hosts from discriminating against guests by falsely claiming that a property is booked, then renting to others.

Airbnb did not bow to critics’ requests that it remove profile photos entirely so that hosts can’t reject guests based on appearance. The company has said that photos are an important security feature so hosts can recognize guests when they check in.

But the report published on the company’s website Thursday, titled “Airbnb’s Work To Fight Discrimination and Build Inclusion,” said new policies will “experiment with reducing the prominence of guest photos in the booking process.”

Among other things, new policies will expand Airbnb’s Instant Book program, which allows hosts to offer homes without approval of specific guests, as long as they meet basic qualifications, with a goal of 1 million listings by Jan. 1.

Users had said their complaints of discrimination were ignored when they reported them to Airbnb. The report says the company has developed “new tools”

Wells Fargo fined $185M

Bank allegedly opened 2 million unauthorized accounts for customers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — California and federal regulators fined Wells Fargo a combined $185 million on Thursday, alleging the bank’s employees illegally opened millions of unauthorized accounts for their customers in order to meet aggressive sales goals.

The San Francisco-based bank will pay $100 million to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, a federal agency created five years ago; $35 million to the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and $50 million to the City and County of Los Angeles. It will also pay restitution to affected customers.

It is the largest fine the CFPB has levied against a financial institution and the largest fine in the history of the Los Angeles City Attorney’s office.

The CFPB said Wells Fargo sales staff opened more than 2 million bank and credit card accounts that may have not been authorized by customers. Money in customers’ accounts was transferred to these new accounts without authorization. Debit cards were issued and activated, as well as PINs created, without telling customers.

In some cases, Wells Fargo employees even created fake email addresses to sign up customers for online banking services.

“Wells Fargo built an incentive-compensation program that made it possible for its employees to pursue underhanded sales practices, and it appears that the bank did not monitor the program carefully,” said CFPB Director Richard Cordray.

The behavior was widespread, the CFPB and other regulators said, involving thousands of Wells Fargo employees.

Los Angeles City Attorney Mike Feuer called Wells Fargo’s behavior “outrageous” and a “major breach of trust.”

“Consumers must be able to trust their banks,” Feuer said.

Wells Fargo’s aggressive sales tactics were first disclosed by The Los Angeles Times in an investigation in 2013. The story series prompted the Los Angeles City Attorney’s office to sue Wells Fargo over its tactics.

Roughly 5,300 employees at Wells Fargo were fired in connection with the behavior, according to Los Angeles City Attorney’s office.

In a statement, Wells Fargo said: “We regret and take responsibility for any instances where customers may have received a product that they did not request.” Wells Fargo said it has refunded $2.6 million in fees associated with products that were opened without authorization.

Despite the L.A. Times investigation, Wells Fargo is still known for having aggressive sales goals for its employees. Wells Fargo’s executives highlight every quarter the bank’s so-called “cross sale ratio,” which is the number of products the bank sells to each of their individual customers. The ratio hovers around six, which means every customer of Wells Fargo has on average six different types of products with the bank.

Probe sullies Fiat Chrysler success story

Feds investigate possibility of fraud in sales numbers

BLOOMBERG

This should’ve been Reid Bigland’s year.

Under his leadership, Fiat Chrysler Automobiles outsold its competitors in Canada for the first time in the automaker’s history while enjoying an unprecedented streak of rising sales in the United States. The success earned Bigland a promotion to head Fiat Chrysler’s Alfa Romeo and Maserati brands, making him one of Chairman Sergio Marchionne’s most trusted deputies.

Now, Bigland, the 49-year-old head of U.S. sales and chief executive officer of Fiat Chrysler Canada, is at the center of U.S. criminal and regulatory investigations into whether the company fraudulently hyped its monthly sales numbers, according to people familiar with the matter. The probe has implications that may go far beyond Fiat Chrysler, potentially upending the U.S. auto industry’s way of reporting sales, long designed to showcase them in the most positive light possible.

“Reid will tell you what he expects and there’s no sleight of hand,” said Tom Leonard, co-owner of Fury Motors in South St. Paul, Minn. “He gives us a number, and we have to figure out how to hit it.”

Automakers have been leaning on dealers for decades to move vehicles off their lots, a pressure that has long been accepted as part of the business. It’s not just consumer purchasing at issue. Investors also weigh monthly sales reports closely for signs of how auto companies are faring. But the government is questioning whether Fiat Chrysler’s tactics go too far:

Bigland’s signature is displayed on documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission containing some of the disputed sales figures. The monthly sales reports often contain statements from Bigland touting monthly results and a streak of continually rising sales that he said went back to 2010. The sales streak was highlighted in other filings, including Fiat Chrysler’s 2015 annual report.

Federal investigators are eager to determine whether documents were falsified and, if so, whether company officials may have known what they were signing. The investigations follow lawsuits filed this year that allege company officials offered money to dealers to falsify sales.

The company and Bigland declined, through a spokeswoman, to comment. But in a news conference near Detroit late last month, Marchionne said “we continue to collaborate with authorities. We inherited a sales-reporting system that goes back to the 1980s. We now have found a way to do it that has absolute integrity.”

In July, after Bloomberg News reported a criminal investigation was under way, the automaker restated its monthly sales numbers, noting that out of 7.7 million reported deliveries, only 4,500 vehicles over a six-year time span were in question. And it pointed out that quarterly revenues, based on deliveries from plants to dealers, were not affected by the restatement.

Still, the recalculation shortened the automaker’s previously reported sales-growth streak by three years, ending in 2013 rather than 2016. Fiat Chrysler’s shares fell 4.3 percent the day after it released the revised numbers and an additional 4.8 percent the following day.

Metal credit card causes stir on social media, overwhelming demand

Chase runs out of alloy for composition of high-fee offering

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The demand has been so overwhelming that the manufacturer ran out of raw material in just days. Enthusiasts extol its virtues all over the Internet. Millennials are clamoring for it.

It’s not a new video game, or some fancy food craze, or even Apple’s latest iPhone, but a credit card.

Calling it plastic wouldn’t do it justice. It is a high-end, high-fee, high-reward card made of a metallic alloy that gives it a satisfying heft and an impressive thunk when you toss it onto the table to pick up the check.

The Chase Sapphire Reserve Card has become the hottest card on the market just two weeks after being introduced, even though it came out during the slow, end-of-summer period, it carries a hefty $450 annual fee, and JPMorgan Chase spent nothing on advertising it.

“I’m telling all my friends about it,” said Maddy Novich, 33, of New York, who applied for the card, as did her husband.

Like so many crazes these days, this one has been fueled by social media, word of mouth and the Internet. Frequent travelers and those who try to game travel-loyalty programs have been writing extensively about the card on blogs and forums.

“I have never seen such interest in a credit card, and I’ve been doing this for 15 years,” said Gary Leff, who runs the travel and points blog View From the Wing.

Chase has approved tens of thousands of applications for the card, said spokeswoman Lauren Francis. Most of the customers are millennials, who typically shun credit cards and are not usually a target for high-fee, ultra-premium plastic.

The demand has been so high that Chase ran out of the alloy, whose composition is a trade secret. Customers are being issued temporary plastic cards.

Credit cards with high fees but generous rewards are aimed at well-to-do customers who spend and travel extensively. The market has long been dominated by American Express with its Platinum Card.

So why’s the Chase card so hot?

Chase offers a 100,000-point sign-up bonus if the customer meets certain spending targets. Those points can be worth up to $1,500 in travel rewards. They can also be converted to hotel or airline points that could secure, oh, a dreamy hotel suite in the Maldives or a first-class ticket for, say, a honeymoon.

The card also comes with a $300 annual credit toward travel, which effectively makes the annual fee $150.

It has a generous points-earning program, with triple points on travel and dining, and gives access to airport lounges.

“It’s one of the best offers I’ve ever seen. With the amount of travel and dining we do, I saw it as a worthwhile card to get,” Novich said.

The card’s metal composition is also clearly part of the appeal.

Kayla Kania, a 33-year-old manager at an accounting firm from Rockville, Md., proudly posted a picture of her new card on Instagram and said she has received compliments about it from cashiers and a co-worker. “The metal part of it, people get excited about it. It’s weird,” she said. She added: “It’s such a conversation piece.”

Walgreens could lose more stores in deal

Walgreens believes that it will probably have to unload more stores than expected to ease anti-trust concerns over its pending, $9.41 billion acquisition of Rite Aid, a deal that would make the nation's largest drugstore chain even larger.

While it still expects to complete the acquisition this year, the Deerfield, Ill., company said Thursday that it will probably have to divest more than 500 stores.

The company previously said that it expected to divest 500 or fewer.

Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc. says it remains "actively engaged" with the Federal Trade Commission as it reviews the deal.

Mazda recalls 2.2M vehicles worldwide

Mazda is recalling 2.2 million cars and SUVs worldwide because the rear hatches can fall on people and injure them.

The recall covers certain 2010 through 2013 Mazda 3 compact cars, as well as 2012 through 2015 Mazda 5 vans. Also included are certain 2013 to 2016 CX-5 and 2016 CX-3 SUVs.

Mazda says it has no reports of accidents or injuries caused by the problem.

Door latch recall to cost Ford, cut into profits

Ford will spend $640 million to replace door latches on nearly 2.4 million cars, trucks and vans this year because the doors can pop open while the vehicles are moving.

On Thursday, the company announced it would add 1.5 million vehicles to the pesky and growing recall, which has become so costly Ford had to cut its estimated full-year pretax profit to $10.2 billion from at least $10.8 billion.

Customers have been complaining about the problem, which has affected much of Ford's North American model lineup, since 2014. At least 3 million vehicles have been recalled because of the problem.

Amazon slashes price, adds Alexa to tablet

Amazon wants to be under the Christmas tree this year. It has cut the price of its new Fire tablet almost in half and added its popular voice assistant, Alexa, in hopes of making it a hot holiday item, despite a slump in overall tablet sales.

The new Fire HD8 tablet will cost $90, down from $150. Mixed-use battery life is up to 12 hours from 8, and the base storage is doubled to 16 gigabytes.

The biggest change is that the tablet will have Alexa functionality. That means that when users tap and hold the tablet's home button, they can ask the assistant for anything from weather reports to news queries, and also get the device to do things like adjusting the lights or temperature on compatible smart-home devices.

Soda display stacked like twin towers removed

Wal-Mart says a display of Coke cans stacked to look like the World Trade Center has been removed from a Florida store, and was not meant to be disrespectful near the anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attack.

The display was mocked online after a photo was posted on Twitter, and Buzzfeed wrote about it.

The photo showed the World Trade Center towers built of Coke Zero packages. A backdrop of the American flag was made with red regular Coke, silver Diet Coke and blue Sprite. A banner above the display said: "We will never forget."

Wal-Mart said the display was removed Wednesday.

Jimmy John's sells majority stake to Roark

Sandwich chain Jimmy John's Sandwiches says it sold a majority stake in the company to private equity firm Roark Capital Group.

Financial terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Roark Capital of Atlanta has invested in several fast food companies before, including pretzel seller Auntie Anne's and sandwich restaurant chain Arby's.

Founded in 1983, Jimmy John's has more than 2,500 Jimmy John's locations across the country and plans to open 1,100 more in the next few years. As a comparison, rival sandwich chain Subway has more than 44,000 shops.

Jimmy John's says founder Jimmy John Liautaud will remain as chairman of the company's board. James North will remain as president and CEO of the privately held company, which is based in Champaign, Ill.

Tech slide pushes stocks down

Energy sector's success offset by retailer declines

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A slide in technology and consumer-focused companies helped pull U.S. stock indexes modestly lower Thursday, offsetting strong energy sector gains.

A broad swath of retailers, from department stores to fast-food chains, also notched losses, while most of the big gainers were oil production and drilling companies. They got a boost from a report indicating fuel stockpiles fell precipitously last week. The price of U.S. crude also jumped on the report, and closed nearly 5 percent higher.

U.S. bond yields surged, as traders reacted to the European Central Bank's decision to leave its key interest rates unchanged and hold off on extending a stimulus program.

Still, in the absence of any major new economic data, the stock indexes continued a recent pattern of mostly sluggish trading.

Serena falls in semifinals again

Williams stopped short in bid for record 23rd Grand Slam

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For the second year in a row, Serena Williams' bid to make history ended with a shocking loss in the U.S. Open semifinals.

A seventh title at Flushing Meadows, which would have been an Open-era record, will have to wait. So will a 23rd Grand Slam championship, another record. And her 3½-year reign at No. 1 in the WTA rankings is over, too, one week shy of what would have been yet another mark.

Undone by a half-dozen double-faults, including on match point, and dealing with an injured left knee that limited her movement, Williams was upset 6-2, 7-6 (5) by big-serving Karolina Pliskova of the Czech Republic on Thursday night.

"Karolina played great today. I think if she had played any less, then maybe I would have had a chance," Williams said. "So I think I wasn't at 100 percent, but I also think she played well. She deserved to win today."

The 10th-seeded Pliskova began her on-court interview by blurting out that she couldn't believe she had eliminated Williams to earn a spot in her first major final. Then Pliskova changed course, saying: "I mean, actually, I do believe it. I always knew I have a chance to beat anyone if I'm playing my game."

At the 2015 U.S. Open, Williams' bid for a calendar-year Grand Slam ended when she lost in the semifinals to unseeded Roberta Vinci of Italy in one of the biggest surprises in tennis history. This one goes pretty high on the list, too.

This was the 33rd major semifinal of Williams' career and the first for Pliskova, who beat the 34-year-old American's older sister Venus in the fourth round. Pliskova is only the fourth woman to beat both Williams siblings during the same Grand Slam tournament.

And to think: The 24-year-old Pliskova had never been past the third round in 17 previous appearances at majors.

"I had a goal today to beat Serena. That's what I did," Pliskova said. "I don't care who is there in the final."

Her opponent Saturday will be No. 2 Angelique Kerber or Caroline Wozniacki. Regardless, Kerber will move up one spot to No. 1 on Monday, ending Williams' stay at the top after 186 consecutive weeks, exactly the same number that Steffi Graf compiled to set the record.

Williams, who refused to answer questions about the rankings, and Graf also share the mark for most Grand Slam titles since 1968, when professionals first were admitted to majors. And Williams remains even with Chris Evert with six U.S. Open trophies.

Pliskova, meanwhile, is one victory from her first, and Thursday night she looked the part of an up-and-comer with the strokes and demeanor to go far.

The temperature was in the low 80s, and the air was muggy and still, and Williams kept using the pleats of her black-and-pink skirt to wipe her sweaty palms between points. She flubbed shot after shot, 31 unforced errors in all.

Afterward, Williams dismissed the notion that she might have been fatigued from a grueling three-set quarterfinal against Simona Halep concluded less than 22 hours before the semifinal started. Instead, Williams and her coach, Patrick Mouratoglou, pointed to the left leg that she repeatedly clutched at in the second set. He said she spent far less time than usual warming up for the match after getting treatment much of the day.

"When you're hampered, you're thinking of other things. Like, I was making errors that I never make, and definitely I didn't make in this tournament in particular. So many simple, simple shots that I easily could have made," Williams said. "I just blame that on just mentally thinking about my leg and just not thinking about the shot."

Lochte gets lengthy ban, $100K penalty

World championships also out after drunken gas station incident

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ryan Lochte will forfeit $100,000 and a chance to swim at next year's world championships as part of the penalty for his drunken encounter at a gas station in Brazil during last month's Olympics.

The U.S. Olympic Committee and USA Swimming announced the penalties Thursday. Lochte is banned through the end of June. That means he won't be able to qualify for July's world championships, which normally don't draw top fields in the year after the Olympics.

"As we have said previously, the behavior of these athletes was not acceptable. It unfairly maligned our hosts and diverted attention away from the historic achievements of Team USA," USOC CEO Scott Blackmun said. "Each of the athletes has accepted responsibility for his actions and accepted the appropriate sanctions."

Lochte will also get no monthly funding from either the USOC or USA Swimming. He can't access USOC training centers, must perform 20 hours of community service and will miss Team USA's post-Olympics trip to the White House.

Lochte's attorney, Jeff Ostrow, did not immediately respond to requests for comment from The Associated Press.

Agreeing to four-month suspensions were Gunnar Bentz, Jack Conger and Jimmy Feigen, who were with Lochte at the gas station. Those sanctions, which end Dec. 31, also strip funding and training access and preclude them from the White House visit.

Bentz, 20, also will serve 10 hours of community service for violating a curfew rule for athletes under 21. He released a statement on Twitter saying he'd learned his lesson and was anxious to move on.

The USOC gives a $25,000 bonus to Olympic gold-medal winners, and USA Swimming has awarded a $75,000 gold-medal bonus at past Olympics.

But that money pales in comparison to what Lochte lost last month when key sponsors, including Speedo USA and Ralph Lauren, abandoned the 32-year-old in the wake of his actions at the gas station, then his rapidly changing accounts of what really happened. Estimates have put the financial hit for those losses at around $1 million.

Swimming's international federation, FINA, called the sanctions "proportionate, adequate and sufficient," and said it had no plans to augment them. The International Olympic Committee has referred the case to its ethics commission, which is still reviewing the case.

The near-10-month suspension is four months longer than what Michael Phelps received in 2014 for his second DUI.

Last month, Brazilian police charged Lochte with filing a false robbery report, but he is unlikely to return to Brazil to defend himself.

Deadline-day acquisition tosses complete game, stays unbeaten with Pirates

BY ROB BIERTEMPFEL

During a game a few weeks ago, Pirates pitching coach Ray Searage sat down beside Ivan Nova in the dugout.

Nova, who was acquired from the New York Yankees in a deadline-day trade, was settling in with his new team. Searage wasn't sure how to approach the veteran right-hander.

"I asked him if he wanted a couple of suggestions," Searage said. "He was like, 'Yes, of course.' Since he's been here, he's been very receptive."

Searage smiled, then admitted he hasn't had to change much with Nova.

"Little stuff," Searage said. "We've told him to keep his chin down, so he's more direct to the plate. His delivery is so smooth, and it comes out of his hand at 94 mph. He's got great stuff."

Nova keeps it simple. He throws first-pitch strikes, doesn't often stray from the zone and works inside. That's why he is unbeaten in six starts since joining the Pirates.

On Thursday, Nova put on a clinic against the Cincinnati Reds and paced the Pirates to a 4-1 victory.

"Pretty much more of the same, and it's really good," manager Clint Hurdle said. "Really consistent. Good sink to the fastball down in the zone. Really nice mix of pitches. That's the manual of how you want to get it done in a quick, efficient way."

It was Hurdle's 500th win as manager of the Pirates. Only five other skippers — Fred Clarke (1,472 wins), Danny Murtaugh (1,115) Jim Leyland (851), Chuck Tanner (711) and Frankie Frisch (539) — reached that number while in Pittsburgh.

Nova (12-6) was perfect through the first four innings. The first hit he allowed was a mild-mannered single by Scott Schebler with two outs in the fifth.

In his second complete game in a span of four starts, Nova gave up a run on five hits and struck out four. He threw first-pitch strikes to 20 of 32 batters — something that really kicked in once Nova's curveball began to click in the fourth inning.

"When you fall behind guys, you're going to get hit," Nova said. "So I tried to be aggressive in the strike zone and get quick outs. I know a lot of guys, once they get two strikes, they want to strike them out. But that's when you (throw) a lot of pitches, and it doesn't let you get deep in the game."

Nova needed just 94 pitches to wrap up his fifth career complete game.

"He works fast, throws lots of strikes, gets the ball on the ground," shortstop Jordy Mercer said. "It's fun playing behind him, because he can get three (outs) in a row real quick and get back in the dugout."

The first inning had a promising start for the Pirates then seemed like a lost cause. It ended with them holding a 3-0 lead.

"That's huge," Nova said. "The way I've been pitching, I feel like one or two runs is enough. They gave me three in the first inning, and I was good for the start."

Josh Harrison led off with a double but made a poor decision to run on Andrew McCutchen's grounder and got caught in a rundown.

With two outs, Gregory Polanco singled. Jung Ho Kang whacked an 0-2 fastball — why do pitchers keep feeding him heaters when they're ahead in the count? — toward the notch in left-center for a two-run double.

Third baseman Eugenio Suarez let David Freese's grounder roll by him. Shortstop Zack Cozart's throw was late, and Freese got an infield single.

Francisco Cervelli bounced an RBI single up the middle.

Reds starter Dan Straily needed 30 pitches to get through the first inning. Nova didn't throw his 30th pitch until he faced the second batter of the fourth inning.

The Pirates loaded the bases with two outs in the first and third innings, but Straily escaped each time by striking out Nova. Straily (11-8) worked five innings and gave up three runs on seven hits.

Nova encountered some turbulence in the sixth, when he allowed three hits. With two outs and a runner on third, Cozart beat the shift with an RBI infield single to the right side.

The Pirates got that run back in the bottom of the inning against reliever Keyvius Sampson. Harrison doubled and scored with a feet-first slide on McCutchen's single.

Mercer saved a run in the eighth by stabbing Jose Peraza's sharp grounder with a runner on third.

"A sweet play by a really good shortstop," Hurdle said.

Rookie arms being skipped in rotation

BY TRAVIS SAWCHIK

The Pirates will skip the next scheduled starts of rookie pitchers Chad Kuhl and Jameson Taillon, Pirates manager Clint Hurdle said Thursday.

Drew Hutchison, who was acquired from the Toronto at the trade deadline, will start Saturday in place of Kuhl, and Gerrit Cole will return from the disabled list to start in place of Taillon on Monday in Philadelphia. Hurdle said Kuhl and Taillon then will be inserted back into the rotation.

Why skip Kuhl and Taillon? "It's basically the innings," Hurdle said. "Go ahead and take care of the innings pitched. That's what it is."

Just as the Pirates protected the then-rookie Cole by reducing his second-half work in 2013, the Pirates are trying to protect what could be key rotation members for seasons to come.

After missing the 2014 and '15 seasons to injury, Taillon has thrown a professional high 149<sup>2</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings this season between Triple-A and the majors. Kuhl has thrown 134<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings. He threw a professional-high 153<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings for High-A Bradenton in 2014.

Kuhl and Taillon perhaps are showing signs of fatigue.

Kuhl struggled in his last start Monday, failing to pitch into the third inning. Taillon labored through five innings Wednesday. His command was off. In nine of his previous 10 outings, he had pitched at least six innings.

The Pirates also might have an eye on 2017 and want to get a look at some of their young arms at the major league level. Hurdle said Trevor Williams was a candidate to start Saturday, but he pitched three innings Wednesday.

Glasnow in bullpen ... for now

At the moment, top-rated prospect Tyler Glasnow is not being considered for the rotation.

Glasnow struggled with a number of issues in two major league starts earlier this season.

"Give him an opportunity to pitch in a less open-ended, more controlled situation," Hurdle said of Glasnow in the bullpen. "Maybe some shorter looks initially just to fine-tune some things and get case specific — nail the delivery, the release point, because things have kind of gone ... hot and cold."

While Glasnow perhaps has the highest ceiling among the young Pirates arms, he also arguably is the furthest away. Breaking in a starting pitching prospect in the bullpen is not a new concept.

"The Cardinals have done it recently," Hurdle said. "Back in the olden days, that's where the prospects (broke in), out of the bullpen."

Who's in right?

Josh Bell was back in the lineup Thursday but in a new spot — right field.

The Pirates converted Bell from right field to first base last season, moving Bell from an organizational area of surplus to one of need. But the Pirates have continued to give Bell work in right field, allowing the club additional positional flexibility. Bell was playing right field once a week in Triple-A.

"I wanted to get his bat back in the lineup," Hurdle said. "I thought this was a creative way to do it."

Cole working on delivery

With his season interrupted three times by injury, Cole is searching for mechanical consistency as he readies to make his first start off the DL. Cole said he is working on staying over the pitching rubber longer, which he hopes improves his command.

"Being able to gather before you go down the mound," Cole said. "It's something I've been fighting a lot. I've kind of slipped out of it a little bit. Keep trying to hammer those points, stay over the rubber better, so your body is not in front of your arm."

Schugel expects to return

Reliever A.J. Schugel does not expect his sore right shoulder will keep him out the rest of the season.

Schugel has not pitched since Aug. 29, when he tossed one inning against the Chicago Cubs.

"I felt something (in the shoulder)," Schugel said. "I took a few days off, but it didn't feel the same. I couldn't get anything behind my throw. I don't think it's too serious, though."

Strasburg has strained muscle

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stephen Strasburg has a strained flexor mass in his elbow, and the Nationals don’t know when he will pitch again, but the team said it was relieved the right-hander did not re-tear a ligament.

Manager Dusty Baker and director of athletic training Paul Lessard voiced optimism after an MRI did not reveal ligament damage. Strasburg had Tommy John surgery in August 2011.

“Normally (these injuries) come around very well with treatment and strengthening programs,” Lessard said. “It’s not a season-ending injury, but we still need to take time that he’s nice and strong because of his past.”

Tebow signs with Mets

Having flopped with the New York Jets, Tim Tebow will try to revive his career as an outfielder with the Mets.

Four years removed from his last regular-season snap as an NFL quarterback, the 29-year-old agreed to a minor league contract with the Mets that includes a $100,000 signing bonus.

He will report Sept. 18 to the Instructional League in Port St. Lucie, Fla., and test his baseball skills for three weeks against players just months removed from high school and college.

The Mets then will decide whether he goes to the Arizona Fall League, a winter league or gets personal tutoring to prepare for spring training.

Rays ink Ramirez

The Rays signed veteran shortstop Alexei Ramirez before Thursday night’s game against the Yankees.

Ramirez was released by the Padres on Sunday after losing his job as the team’s starting shortstop.

Ramirez, who turns 35 on Sept. 22, hit .240 with five homers and 41 RBIs in 128 games with San Diego, starting 109 games at shortstop, three in right field and one at designated hitter.

Call sparks controversy in Indians win

The Indians took advantage of a controversial bases-loaded wild pitch in their 10-7 victory over the Astros. The Indians scored a pair of runs on the play in the third inning that led to the ejection of Houston manager A.J. Hinch.

Replays showed Cleveland’s Lonnie Chisenhall fouled off the pitch from David Paulino, but plate umpire and crew chief Jim Joyce stood by his ruling of a wild pitch and Cleveland took a 4-1 lead.

Joyce told a pool reporter he didn’t see or hear the ball hit the bat and whether Chisenhall made contact wasn’t a reviewable play.

Braves’ park opener announced

The Braves’ first game in their new ballpark will be against the Yankees — even though it only will be an exhibition and won’t be open to fans who aren’t season-ticket holders.

The Braves have announced plans to open SunTrust Park by playing an exhibition against the Yankees on March 31, 2017.

Calabria to share skills

Dante Calabria knows he has lived away from Western Pennsylvania for so long that he is no longer a household name in his hometown.

“The nice thing about the computer is you can Google,” Calabria said, with a laugh. “Kids can see that I played at North Carolina and professionally in Europe on high-level teams.”

They also can see that Calabria scored 2,252 points at Blackhawk, led the Cougars to the 1992 PIAA Class AAA crown, won an NCAA title at North Carolina and was a 2014 inductee into the WPIAL Hall of Fame.

And kids can get personalized instruction from Calabria this weekend at the grand opening of SCORE, his new training facility at Greentree Sportsplex.

Calabria and local coaches Rico Abbondanza and Greg Cercone will conduct free skills clinics from 6-9 p.m. Friday and 12, 2, 4 and 6 p.m. Saturday as an introduction to their basketball training academy.

Calabria plans to focus on the fundamentals of ball-handling and shooting, resisting the temptation to play pickup.

“As you get older you start to go back to your roots,” said Calabria, who played professionally overseas for 16 seasons and has coached at the college and high levels.

“I want to give back. I thought it was a good way to give back, to get back to old-school basketball. We want to get back to the basics of teaching. I wanted to come back to Pittsburgh — where I got started — to teach and give something back. I get tired of hearing people saying Pittsburgh’s not a basketball town. I’d like to get some excitement and energy going.”

And bring it back to a time where everyone knows his name.

Franklin Regional’s Palmer Jackson won the Westmoreland Coaches’ Association tournament.

FR’s Jackson claims county title

Panthers’ sophomore nets WCCA tournament record score at Latrobe Elks

BY PAUL SCHOFIELD

When Palmer Jackson played in his first Westmoreland County Coaches’ Association golf tournament in 2015, things didn’t go well.

But the Franklin Regional sophomore atoned for that performance Thursday with a record-setting victory at the 13th annual event at the Latrobe Elks Golf Course.

His 2-under-par 70 was good enough for a two-shot victory against Hempfield senior Andrew Thomas and a three-shot margin over two of his friends: Kiski School senior Mark Goetz and Latrobe sophomore Brady Pevarnik, who each shot 1-over 73.

Jackson birdied the final hole to hold off a late charge from Thomas.

A birdie on No. 1 and an eagle on No. 3 helped build Jackson’s confidence early.

“I’ll take a 70,” Jackson said of the tournament record score. “I shot an 84 here last year, so I’m very pleased. Beating players like Mark and Brady is always good.

“They’re so good, and we battle all of the time. I just tried to keep things simple.”

Jackson said he bombed some drives, had good iron play and putted well.

He is the second Franklin Regional golfer to win a county title; Eddie Zhang won in 2013.

It was the first time Franklin Regional won the title team. The Panthers shot 395 despite missing two starters. The other Panthers scores counted were: Jamie Mauro (seventh with a 77), Ethan Yohe (ninth with an 80) and Ben Peticca and Clayton Skoff at 84.

“It shows what kind of balance we have,” Jackson said. “We had other guys fill in and step up.”

Thomas, who placed third in 2015, said he was pleased to trim three shots off his score.

“They’re all good golfers,” Thomas said. “I think it helped that I was in a group with Palmer and Brady. It helps you keep focused.

“You know where you stand playing with them and who you are chasing after.”

Thomas had three birdies and three bogeys, two on his first two holes.

“I was able to rebound on Nos. 3 and 4 to get back to even,” Thomas said. “I birdied the first three par 5s and needed a birdie on the final hole, but Palmer ended up birding it himself.

“This tournament is a stepping stone for the WPIAL and PIAA individual tournaments in a month. My goal is to make and hopefully win those tournaments.”

Goetz said a poor ending hurt his chances. He double bogeyed No. 17 and bogeyed No. 18.

“I bombed a drive over my dad’s head on 18, but it ended up going out of bounds,” Goetz said. “I wasn’t hitting my wedges well, either.”

Mike Lubrani finished fifth with a 3-over 75 and helped Belle Vernon finish second (411).

Greensburg Salem’s Matt D’Amico finished sixth with a 76, followed by Mauro, Kiski School’s Ben Gardner (78) and Yohe.

DeCastro agrees to 6-year contract

All-Pro lineman gets $58 million, becomes NFL's 3rd-highest paid guard

BY MARK KABOLY

David DeCastro is going to be a Steeler for a long time.

The Steelers on Thursday agreed to a long-term extension with the All-Pro lineman on a new six-year deal worth $58 million, including $16 million in signing and roster bonuses that make him one of the highest-paid guards in the NFL just days from the team's self-imposed deadline.

DeCastro, 26, was set to make $8.07 million this year after the Steelers picked up the fifth-year option on his rookie contract last year. The Steelers ripped up that deal for salary cap purposes and created a new contract. DeCastro still will make $8.07 million in base salary this year.

The Steelers' first-round pick in 2012 will average $9.7 million per season, which makes him the third-highest paid guard behind Oakland's Kelechi Osemele and Chicago's Kyle Long.

Long signed a four-year, $40 million extension last week. Osemele signed for $58.4 million as a free agent from Baltimore in March. Osemele's deal likely made DeCastro's deal drag on, while Long's put things into motion.

"My mindset has always been that it wasn't going to get done until the day before the game," DeCastro said Wednesday. "It is easier to look at it this way. I didn't want to think one way or another. I wanted to keep an open mind. I wanted to get it done."

Fellow guard Ramon Foster said he was thrilled for DeCastro after the signing became official Thursday night.

"I couldn't be happier for a guy than Dave," Foster said. "He didn't make a big deal about it, and I am just glad he got it done. (It's) well deserved."

The Steelers have invested a lot in their offensive line over the past six years.

They have used first-round picks on Maurkice Pouncey in 2010 and DeCastro in 2012, and a second-round pick on Marcus Gilbert in 2011. They committed $142 million to the three in contract extensions over the past two years.

More importantly, the Steelers ensured the core group of the offensive line will be together until 2019.

"He's the best. I can tell you I wouldn't be having the success I have had if it wasn't for him," Gilbert said of DeCastro. "We have a good relationship, and it's growing and it's getting a lot better, and it's great having a guy like that playing next to me. There aren't a lot of tackles who can say they play with a guard like David DeCastro. This guy, he brings out the best in me."

Davis ready from 1st snap

Redskins' personnel could put rookie slot CB on field to begin game

BY CHRIS ADAMSKI

When the Steelers' official depth chart for Week 1 of the regular season was unveiled, much of the attention centered on the only rookie listed among the first-teamers.

Perhaps more of it should have been on the rookie who has a better chance of starting — and playing more snaps.

Second-round pick Sean Davis said Thursday he has been taking practice reps as the top slot cornerback as the Steelers prepare to open their season Monday night at the Washington Redskins.

Considering the Redskins last season used three-receiver sets on more than 50 percent of their snaps and at a rate more than the NFL average (according to Pro Football Focus), odds are the Steelers will open not in their base defense but in the nickel.

And regardless of who lines up among the 11 Steelers defenders on the field for the Redskins' first offensive snap — an exercise dictated by what personnel Washington aligns in — the Steelers' fifth defensive back, in all likelihood, will play more often than their top nose tackle.

That fifth defensive back will be Davis, who will be making his NFL debut on the road against the team of his hometown.

"I'll be playing small, shifty guys, and the tight ends that I'll see are probably better than some of the receivers in the league," Davis said, referring primarily to Redskins' wideouts Jamison Crowder and DeSean Jackson and tight end Jordan Reed. "It's going to be a great challenge and a great matchup this week, so I'm looking forward to it."

Rookies rarely start for the Steelers on defense. Ryan

CHAZ PALLA | TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Sean Davis could be on the field for the first defensive play of the Steelers' regular-season opener against the Redskins, who last season used a lot of three-receiver sets.

Shazier, the team's first-round pick in 2014, started his NFL debut against the Browns, but there hasn't been a rookie defensive back who started the regular-season opener for the Steelers since Chad Scott in 1997.

Whether Davis officially gets credit with a "start" is irrelevant — if he doesn't play the Steelers' first defensive snap, another rookie, defensive tackle Javon Hargrave, instead would be in line to start. But personnel packages featuring a slot cornerback, however, played more than ones using three defensive linemen for the Steelers last season.

Defensive coordinator Keith Butler did not want to confirm that Davis will be the slot cornerback — "I don't want to say right now, to be honest with you," Butler said Thursday — but he did mention Davis and William Gay as candidates. Gay rarely has played in the slot throughout training camp, and a move of Gay to the slot would necessitate another rookie, Artie Burns, starting on the outside.

Burns missed a large portion of training camp practices because of a left quad injury and could use some more seasoning, which in part led to the Steelers trading for Justin Gilbert earlier this week.

That leaves Davis, who was drafted as a safety and remains listed there on the official roster. But although he said that he has been asked to play more of a traditional safety in select subpackages for this week's game plan, Davis more has reverted back to playing corner like he did as a senior at Maryland.

"I'm just doing things the veteran way because I'm out there, and I can't be a rookie," Davis said. "I can't play like a rookie. I can't do rookie things."

During a practice earlier this week, coach Mike Tomlin yelled at Davis when he made a mental mistake during a rep. Tomlin even referred to starting strong safety Robert Golden as needing to providing the proper guidance on the play.

Davis recognizes he must lean on the veterans in the secondary like Golden, Gay and Mike Mitchell, saying he makes it a point to pick their brains during position meetings.

"I take pride in that a lot of rookies don't come in and start, so I am embracing that, and that's what I came here to do and it's kind of expected from me," Davis said. "So I've got to keep my head focused and stay in my playbook and stay humble but hungry and keep competing. That's kind of my mindset, and man, I'm just looking forward to putting good stuff on tape."

STEELERS NOTEBOOK

Burns raises workload ahead of season opener

BY RALPH N. PAULK

Admittedly, it's been a slow start for cornerback Artie Burns, who was bothered during training camp and preseason by a handful of nagging ailments. But the Steelers' first-round draft pick has picked up the intensity in preparation for the season opener at Washington on "Monday Night Football."

While defensive coordinator Keith Butler wouldn't commit to specific roles for Burns, he left open a window of opportunity for him to face Washington quarterback Kirk Cousins.

"I think (Burns) is covering 84 (Antonio Brown) a little better," defensive coordinator Keith Butler said. "That's how I judge it. If he's standing close to 84, then I feel pretty good about it. He's still learning, but I like his track right now."

Butler was hesitant to say the recent addition of Justin Gilbert has fired up this year's first-round draft pick.

"I really don't care what the reasons were, and I'm glad to see him working the way his working," Butler said. "When he gets an opportunity to play, he has to play well. He wants to be good, and that's always a good thing to have."

Burns said his improvement leading up to the season opener is a matter of confidence and knowledge of the defense.

"I'm getting better every day, and guarding AB (Brown) is something I want to do every day," Burns said. "I've been working on my technique against one of the best receivers in the league."

Injury updates

Wide receiver Markus Wheaton was among four players who missed Thursday's practice. Wheaton has been slow to recover from a shoulder injury.

"If I was great, I would have practiced today," Wheaton said. "I'm still a little banged up, but I should be able to go for the game."

Fullback Roosevelt Nix has a back injury that kept him from practicing for much of the preseason. Offensive lineman Cody Wallace was out with a knee injury, and cornerback Senquez Golson continues to sit with a foot injury.

Five players were limited in practice: safety Shamarko Thomas (groin), offensive tackle Marcus Gilbert (elbow), defensive tackles Javon Hargrave (quad) and Dan McCullers (knee), and defensive end Cameron Heyward (ankle).

Defense shifts focus

The Steelers figure they have to focus on Washington tight end Jordan Reed. After all, he led the team with 87 receptions for 952 yards and 11 touchdowns last season. Still, they can't ignore receivers Pierre Garçon and DeSean Jackson, whose 17.1 yards-per-catch average is the best of any receiver since 2008.

"When you have multiple threats, you have to execute the defense that's called," safety Robert Golden said. "We can't focus on one guy, considering they also have a good running game."

"Their quarterback (Cousins) has been playing good football, especially at the end of last season. But we have to focus on what we have to do. We have to make plays when we're in position to do so."

Cousins, who set a club record last year with 4,166 passing yards, has a tendency to force the ball to Reed. But if running back Matt Jones can elude the Steelers' defensive front, it will put Golden and Mike Mitchell in precarious situations when facing play-action.

Looking at turnovers

Offensive coordinator Todd Haley enters the regular season with the simple goal of reducing the number of turnovers. Steelers quarterbacks threw 21 interceptions, and they lost seven of 16 fumbles.

"We gave up the ball too many times last year," Haley said. "For us to be up 1-plus turnover a game, that's too much for a group that wants to be great."

BY DOUG GULASY

Saturday's other games to watch

● Bucknell at Duquesne, 6 p.m.: After opening the season with a 45-10 loss at Youngstown State, Duquesne (0-1) looks to get back on track in its home opener at Rooney Field. Quarterback Dillon Buechel (Montour), who threw three touchdown passes in the Dukes' victory over Bucknell last season, faces a Bucknell defense that forced six turnovers in a win over Marist last week.

● IUP at East Stroudsburg, 6:05 p.m.: After a bye week to open the season, No. 10 IUP travels to face an East Stroudsburg team coming off a dominating victory over Brevard. Keep an eye on the ground games: Led by quarterback Lenny Williams (Sto-Rox) and running back Chris Temple, IUP averaged 239.9 rushing yards last season — tops in the PAC — and East Stroudsburg totaled 271 yards on the ground last week.

● St. Vincent at Thiel, 7 p.m.: A pair of PAC teams looking for improvements in 2016 match up. Quarterback Derek Stewart, a transfer from Dubuque, passed for 424 yards and five touchdowns in his St. Vincent debut, a 47-24 win at Alma (Mich.). Thiel did its damage on the ground in a 44-21 win over Allegheny, rushing for 297 yards and five touchdowns.

Player to watch: Dante Satcher

School: Robert Morris
Position: RB/KR
Class: Sophomore
Height: 6-foot
Weight: 170 pounds
Of note: Satcher got Robert Morris off to a fast start when he returned the opening kickoff against Alderson-Broadus 99 yards for a touchdown, the longest such return in school history. It provided the Colonials with their only points in a 14-7 loss. Satcher also rushed for 42 yards.

Game of the week: Slippery Rock at West Chester

When: 12:05 p.m. Saturday

By now, Slippery Rock knows the routine of traveling to West Chester: the five-hour drive, staying in the same hotel and making the long walk from the visitors' locker room to the field at John A. Farrell Stadium.

More than anything, The Rock know to expect a challenge.

Slippery Rock is visiting West Chester for the third consecutive season, but for the first time in the regular season. West Chester knocked The Rock out of the NCAA Division II playoffs in 2014, but Slippery Rock avenged that defeat with a 61-12 victory in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference championship game last season.

"They always seem like big games," said Slippery Rock junior defensive end Marcus Martin (West Mifflin). "I know they are, and I know we will, treat this like it is a PSAC championship. We've just got to be ready to play."

As familiar as the trip may be, the teams look different than the ones that met in the PSAC championship last season.

West Chester, the preseason PSAC East favorite, returned 18 starters, including all five offensive linemen and five all-conference defenders. Slippery Rock replaced four of five starters on the offensive line and is breaking in a new quarterback, transfer Don King III, formerly of Sam Houston State. New, too, is Slippery Rock coach Shawn Lutz, who took over after longtime Rock coach George Mihalik retired.

"We're going to get everybody's best game just because we've been the champs, and we cannot take a big game off," said Lutz, formerly Slippery Rock's defensive coordinator. "Anybody can beat you, and it's almost like starting over. No one cares about the past. They're going to give you their best game, so we've got to be sharp, we've got to be efficient and we've got to be ready to play."

Slippery Rock opened the season with a 31-28 victory over New Haven (Conn.), extending its NCAA Division II-best home winning streak to 18, but it didn't come easily. The Rock (1-0) jumped to a two-touchdown lead in the first quarter, but the advantage evaporated as New Haven scored the next 28 points.

Slippery Rock scored 17 points in the final quarter to win.

SLIPPERY ROCK ATHLETICS

Slippery Rock junior defensive end Marcus Martin, a West Mifflin graduate, is a half-sack away from breaking the all-time PSAC record.

"When we're up, we've got to finish it, and we didn't do that," Lutz said. "We've got to learn we've got to finish it. We made too many mental mistakes, and we can't have as many penalties. We've just got to play a four-quarter game and have the focus of what we've done."

After communication problems caused some big plays on the defensive side of the ball, Martin said he expected a more focused effort against West Chester (1-0), which overcame a 10-point fourth-quarter deficit to beat Bentley (Mass.), 31-24, last week.

"It's kind of a little wake-up call when you have a team come back on you like that," Martin said. "It just makes you want to prepare harder, and I think everybody's a lot more focused."

Saturday's game matches strength against strength: West Chester's offensive line, led by All-American left tackle Doug Gilbert, against Slippery Rock's defensive line, headlined by All-American Martin.

Martin set a Slippery Rock record last week with his 33rd career sack — in the first game of his junior season — and can break the PSAC record of 33½ this week.

PITT VS. PENN STATE

NOON SATURDAY, HEINZ FIELD
TV: ESPN

Quarterbacks will be key

Men under center emerge as crucial variable in renewal of Pitt-Penn State rivalry

BY JERRY DiPAOLA

After you ignore what doesn't matter — Pitt's media blackout and Penn State denying the existence of a rivalry — you can easily determine what actually will decide the outcome Saturday when two in-state rivals get together for the first time in 16 years:

Quarterbacks. Doesn't it always come down to the quarterbacks?

One of Pitt's best chances of winning revolves around its ability to limit what Penn State quarterback Trace McSorley can do in the running game.

Meanwhile, if Penn State can stifle Pitt quarterback Nathan Peterman and his passing game, the offense loses an important option, and the run game could suffer as it did last week against Villanova.

Pitt coach Pat Narduzzi called Penn State running back Saquon Barkley "maybe the best tailback in the country." But if Barkley gets no help from McSorley — a running threat himself — Pitt can lean its defense toward Barkley and, perhaps, minimize his effectiveness.

In the film room, coaches call what McSorley does so well RPOs, or run/pass options.

"They're not easy," Narduzzi said. "You'll see a lot when they get down in the red zone."

Narduzzi said he has seen Penn State get away with penalties — linemen illegally downfield on pass plays — when offensive coordinator Joe Moorhead calls an RPO.

"I can show you tape of linemen downfield 5 yards and the umpire looking (the other way)," Narduzzi said. "The ball has been thrown over (to the other side of the field)."

"It really confuses not only the defense but the officials. I think officials have trouble doing their job."

Narduzzi said he will have a conversation with the officials before the game to alert them to the possibility of Penn State offensive linemen straying too far from the line of scrimmage.

"I don't know if they will listen to me, but we will have a conversation,"

PHOTOS: CHAZ PALLA AND BARRY REEGER | TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Pitt quarterback Nathan Peterman (left) and Penn State quarterback Trace McSorley opened their seasons strong Saturday. Peterman completed 19 of 32 passes for 175 yards with two touchdowns in a 28-7 win over Villanova. McSorley completed 16 of 31 passes for 209 yards with two touchdowns in a 33-13 win over Kent State.

he said.

Narduzzi likened the play to what Tim Tebow did successfully at Florida when he won the Heisman Trophy in 2007.

"It's (the quarterback) running and then jumping up and throwing the ball," he said. "It looks like a run, and all of a sudden, he throws it to a tight end in the end zone."

Peterman's game is structured differently. He can run, but he's at his best when he sits in the pocket and surveys the field.

The Villanova game marked the ninth time in his 12 career starts at Pitt that Peterman threw no interceptions. But he totaled only 175 passing yards against an FCS team, and the offense managed only two touchdowns in the game's first 54 minutes.

"I think he was pressing and trying too hard to make plays," Narduzzi said. "Instead of relaxing and (letting) the game come to (him) and doing the little things you need to do to win football games.

"I think he wants to be perfect. We're not going to be perfect. I'm not perfect. Kids aren't going to be perfect.

"They're going to make mistakes. Just relax and try to play the game."

Narduzzi said his players "are on edge a little bit, which is a good thing.

"Slowly, as we get to game time, we expect to continue to rise in what we're doing."

Notes: Narduzzi made a plea to Pitt fans: "They need to wear the blue and gold and be obnoxious," he said. ... Narduzzi had nothing to say about two injured players, linebacker Elijah Zeise and defensive end Dewayne Hendrix. "I'm not going to comment on any injuries or health status, good or bad," he said. "We'll leave it at that."

Penn State assistant downplays rivalry angle

Gateway grad Smith acknowledges game as 'exciting,' however

BY BOB COHN

Terry Smith is a fiercely loyal Penn Stater, a graduate and former football player and now an assistant coach. If nothing else, he knows to follow the boss's lead and the company line. So when Smith was asked Thursday whether Saturday's Penn State-Pitt game is the renewal of a long-standing rivalry, he quickly responded, "For me, personally, no, it is not."

Fair enough. Penn State coach James Franklin said as much earlier in the week, and so did some players. Athletic director Sandy Barbour has suggested the university doesn't need a rival. The team slogan, splashed everywhere, is "Unrivaled." Regardless of the emotions attached to the schools' first meeting in 16 years and the boiling anticipation that accompanies it, "I look at it as the next game up on the schedule," Smith said.

He explained, "One thing that coach Franklin drives home to us is that the next game is the most important game."

Smith also said, "It's the biggest game of the season because it's the current game."

Occasionally, however, the former Gateway player and coach perhaps revealed his true nature. He sounded less like a cornerbacks coach and defensive recruiting coordinator and more like the player who in 1991 said, "I am shocked it would end like this" after it was announced the annual series was over by the next season.

"I can remember growing up and watching this game and obviously all the greats that played at Pitt and the greats that played at Penn State, and it's exciting," the present-day Smith said.

Smith called the game, "a great atmosphere," and reminded reporters, as he reminded his players — according to linebacker Brandon Bell — that he was 3-1 against Pitt. He said he loved playing at late, often-lamented Pitt Stadium even with its "bad turf." He described the place as "historic."

"The memories are fond and great, and they were very competitive games," Smith said.

Asked about the walk up Cardiac Hill, he said, "I knew what it was all about, being a youngster and going there and watching Tony Dorsett and Dan Marino play. It was exciting. It was a thrill."

A quick, athletic quarterback at Gateway, Smith became a receiver who ended his Nittany Lions career second in touchdown catches and third in receptions and yardage.

Smith and offensive line coach Matt Limegrover, who grew up in Penn Hills and graduated from Central Catholic, will return to familiar turf and do some recruiting Friday (offensive coordinator Joe Moorhead also is from Penn Hills and Central Catholic). The impact of Saturday's game "might impact one or two recruits," Smith said.

"It's exciting," he said. "The hoopla, the fanfare, the social media, the tweets and messages, it creates a great environment for our kids. When I played forever ago, we had that opportunity. Our guys are feeling the excitement. They feel there's a little something different in the air, and we just can't wait to get to Saturday."

Even though it's not a rivalry.

FISHING
WEEKLY REPORT
• Fishing conditions at Lake Erie are improving as anglers are reporting yellow perch catches between 45 to 60 feet out on the Walnut water. Bass anglers have had luck in the bay using assorted soft plastic as bait. Walleye also have been steady in the area east of East Avenue.
• At Lake Arthur, anglers are anticipating more bites from yellow perch, which usually become more prevalent in September and October. Until then, fishermen are catching walleye and channel catfish on the Old 422 roadbed in front of Crescent Bay, adjacent to the Crescent Bay Island. Nightcrawlers have been working well for walleye and catfish, and a rubber twister tail grub following behind a bobber is a solid approach for yellow perch.
• Kahle Lake in Clarion County is providing anglers with a variety of bluegill, yellow perch and a number of largemouth bass.
• Walleye, smallmouth bass and trout are being reported in Redbank Creek, near the dam in New Bethlehem.
• Solid amounts of panfish and largemouth bass are being reported at Beaver Creek Ponds Project.
• The Allegheny River in Clarion County is yielding channel catfish to anglers fishing the waters at night. Walleye and smallmouth bass also are hitting near the Parker Islands and toward the mouth of the Clarion River mouth. In Upper Clarion River, catches of smallmouth bass and a few trout are being reported.
• Because of the drawdown in water levels at Piney Dam, a good deal of channel catfish, walleye and smallmouth bass are being caught.
• Anglers fishing Tionesta Lake are finding bluegill and yellow perch in the vicinity of the marina. Musky also are being found in the morning and evening.
• In Venango County, fishermen are catching smallmouth bass, walleye and a few muskellunge.
• At Cross Creek Lake, anglers are picking up more bluegill. Ant jigs, maggots and meal worms are working well with the bluegill, which are being caught in about 10 feet of water. Largemouth bass also are active in the area and are being picked up mostly on shiners.
• On the Ohio River in Western Allegheny County, cooler water temperatures are providing an increased number of walleye, smallmouth bass, sauger and large-sized catfish. Anglers are catching the fish from boat and from shore.
• The Quemahoning Reservoir is giving off northern pike and largemouth bass to local fishermen.
• Anglers are catching channel catfish at Somerset Lake. Season, size and creel limit regulations have been lifted at the lake in preparation for a complete drawdown that is scheduled to occur in 2017.
• Cranberry Glade Lake is weedy, making shoreline fishing difficult. But fishermen using boats are reporting largemouth bass catches.
• Low water levels on the Youghiogheny River Lake are leading to a good deal of smallmouth bass catches.

IN BRIEF

U.S. group Liberty Media purchases Formula One

WIRE REPORTS

In the world of motorsports, there is Formula One and then there is everyone else. But despite its popularity, Formula One is barely a blip on the radar in the United States, where NASCAR, IndyCar and even sports cars rule supreme.

But Formula One is getting a new owner, one based in the U.S., no less, and the change at the top should amount to new eyes giving a fresh look at the global reach of the most popular form of motorsport in the world.

Liberty Media, which has stake in SiriusXM and the Atlanta Braves, announced this week it will purchase F1 from European private equity firm CVC Capital Partners for $4.4 billion.

Formula One returned to the U.S. in 2012 with a race in Austin, Texas, but has to date failed to find a second venue in America. While the North American fan base is solid, it's a niche audience compared to other places in the world.

Pro football

San Francisco 49ers owner Jed York followed the lead of quarterback Colin Kaepernick and pledged $1 million to improving racial and economic inequality and building a stronger relationship between law enforcement authorities and the communities they serve.

● Denver Broncos linebacker Brandon Marshall, a college teammate of Kaepernick, took to a knee during the playing of the national anthem before Denver's season opener against Carolina.

● 49ers running back Carlos Hyde was cleared from the NFL's post-concussion protocol and practiced fully.

● Atlanta Falcons wide receiver Julio Jones practiced without restrictions and should be ready for Sunday's opener against Tampa Bay.

● New York Jets wide receiver Brandon Marshall fully participated in practice, a day after being limited because of a sore hip.

● The Dallas Cowboys restructured the contract of veteran tight end Jason Witten to free up $2.75 million in salary cap space.

College football

The U.S. Military Academy removed a video clip of the football team's postgame locker-room celebration after its upset win over Temple and is investigating whether a team prayer violated the religious freedom of the players. West Point spokesman Francis J. DeMaro Jr. said a third party made allegations the video violated the First Amendment rights of some of the cadets.

Soccer

Landon Donovan is returning to the LA Galaxy, ending a 21-month retirement to suit up for his MLS team for at least the rest of this season. Donovan, one of the most decorated players in U.S. history, wrote that he was persuaded to return after watching several key Galaxy players pick up injuries in recent weeks.

● Real Madrid and Atletico Madrid lost their appeals against one-year transfer bans by FIFA for breaking rules protecting underage players. FIFA says its appeals committee dismissed challenges filed by both clubs after transfer embargoes were imposed in January.

Basketball

Allen Iverson arrived about 90 minutes late for the pre-induction news conference at the Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame, a day before he was scheduled to become a member of the basketball shrine. The Hall said Iverson had travel problems. He said the delay involved a "personal situation; family"

● Detroit Pistons assistant coach Tim Hardaway faces up to six months in jail after pleading no contest to violating Michigan's so-called "super-drunk" driving law.

Hockey

The Nashville Predators

named forward Mike Fisher as the seventh captain in franchise history, replacing Shea Weber who was traded to Montreal in July for P.K. Subban in a stunning move.

● Predators center Paul Gaustad is retiring at the age of 34, he announced on his Instagram account. Known for his face-off efficiency, Gaustad had 89 goals and 142 assists in 727 career regular-season games.

● Edmonton Oilers forward Connor McDavid was named captain of Team North America in the World Cup of Hockey.

Golf

Robert Castro ran off eight birdies until a bogey on his last hole for a 7-under-par 65 and the temporary lead at the BMW Championship in Carmel, Ind. Just under half the 69-man field finished the round, which was delayed by storms and rain.

● Ben Evans birdied five of his first six holes and finished with a 6-under 65 at The Dutch for a one-stroke lead in the European Tour's KLM Open.

Olympics

NCAA president Mark Emmert said member schools might reconsider allowing athletes who compete in the Olympics to accept payments for performance. NCAA rules allow athletes to accept money from national sports governing bodies and bonuses for winning medals, but some payments, such as the $750,000 received by Singapore gold medalist and Texas swimmer Joseph Schooling, have brought the rule into question.

Dahlia show draws passionate growers

Hundreds of flowers will compete for awards at Trax Farm annual event

BY DEBORAH WEISBERG

At 84, Harry Nordstrom still grows hundreds of dahlias in his Bethel Park garden and favors big cactus-type blooms and the color yellow. His love of dahlias was sparked 60 years ago when a colleague at the phone company brought dahlia tubers from his garden to give away at work.

“The tubers looked like sweet potatoes, so I asked him if that’s what they were,” Nordstrom says. “He said, ‘No, dahlias.’ Well, I’d never heard of dahlias, but I was a farm boy who’d grown other things, like roses and mums, so I took them home and planted them. Once they bloomed, I was bitten.”

A juried exhibition featuring hundreds of cut dahlias will be on display Sept. 10 and 11 at the Greater Pittsburgh Dahlia Society’s 79th annual Dahlia Show at Trax Farms in Finleyville. Growers will compete for dozens of awards, ranging from largest bloom to most perfect bloom in its class, according to Nordstrom, who is show chairman and an American Dahlia Society-accredited senior judge.

“Dahlias are classed by the size, shape and color of their bloom, and there’s a big variety,” Nordstrom says. “Some have pointy petals like the cactus dahlia; some are round like ball and pom-pom dahlias, and some are flat. They range in size from golf ball to basketball to the kind people refer to as dinner-plate dahlias.”

Diane Kavchak’s introduction to dahlias occurred 28 years ago when she married a man who’d grown up with dahlias.

“I’d always loved roses, and then Bill planted dahlias and I fell in love with them — the beautiful colors, the different petal formations,”

It’s obvious Russ Bedner is a people person. He laughs easily while talking to customers as he helps them find the right plant.

The 38-year owner of Bedner’s Farm and Greenhouse in McDonald has spent most of his life in the business. He is the inspiration for this story, talking about plants he loves but that gardeners might not have discovered yet.

Bedner sits inside a wooden gazebo looking down at a little piece of paper with his scribbled notes. His first suggestion for gardeners is a small shrub called Thuja plicata ‘Whipcord.’

“It looks like ropes growing out of it,” he says of the relative of arborvitae. It grows 4 to 5 feet tall and wide with a mounding habit. “You have to see it,” he says. “That’s a really unique plant.”

There’s a row of beautiful yellow Ilex ‘Drops of Gold’ along a gravel path in the greenhouse. The ever-green plant is 4 to 5 feet tall and wide, a sun lover and tough, too, because it’s a holly.

“Another great thing: It’s easily shaped if you want to keep it smaller, round or prune into a hedge,” he says. “The more sun you put it in, the better.”

Anemone ‘Pocahontas’ has double pink blossoms and gets only about 2 feet tall.

“It’s an awesome-looking flower,” Bedner says. “It blooms later in the season. There aren’t a lot of late-flowering perennials.”

Certain moisture conditions can cause tomatoes to split

Question: We grew some wonderful cherry tomatoes this year, about a dozen varieties. The plants were fairly healthy, with just a few yellowing leaves, for most of the season. The trouble was that the tomatoes started splitting over the past few weeks. They were fine one day, and the next day we’d go out to pick them, and the ripe tomatoes would be cracked open. Not all the varieties cracked, but I started picking them before they were fully ripe thinking that might help. What causes this to happen, and how can we prevent it next year?

Answer: Tomato cracking is a common problem during seasons like the one we’ve just had. The tomato splits open, revealing the flesh and seeds inside and exposing the interior of the fruit to infection and rot. The cracks most often start at the stem end and extend down toward the base of the tomato. It’s a problem that has several different causes.

First, certain tomato varieties are more prone to cracking than others. Cherries in general are more crack-prone than standard tomato varieties. The popular hybrid cherry tomato ‘Sungold’ may have a delicious, sweet flavor, but it’s notorious for having split fruits. The same goes for ‘Sweet Gold,’ ‘Sweet 100’ and several other popular cherry varieties. Do some research before selecting the varieties you plant next year; be on the lookout for selections with noted resistance to cracking. Some good choices include ‘Sun Sugar,’ ‘Chocolate Sprinkles,’ ‘Sweet Million’ and ‘Gardener’s Delight.’

Cracking also can occur in cherry and standard tomatoes when a prolonged period of dry weather is followed by heavy rainfall. This occurs because, when the plant is subjected to low moisture levels for an extended period of time, the skin of the fruit hardens, rather than growing. Then, when excessive amounts of water become available to the plant, the water is drawn up into the fruit where it collects and causes the skin to burst. To prevent this type of cracking, make sure your tomato plants stay well-watered during dry periods. Consistent moisture is the key.

Another cause of cracking in tomato fruits is excessive soil nitrogen, particularly when it’s coupled with low soil potassium levels. Do not feed your tomatoes nitrogen-rich fertilizers because this promotes lush, green growth at the expense of quality fruit production.

Tomatoes also can split if they’re left on the vine too long. Harvest the fruits regularly and store them at room temperature.

If cracking is problematic on standard tomatoes, the same issues are at play. Crack-resistant standard tomato varieties include ‘Marglobe,’ ‘Jet Star,’ ‘Cosmonaut Volkov’ and ‘Early Girl.’

Dahlia show draws passionate growers

says Diane, a Dahlia Society board member. "The only negative is that dahlias don't have a fragrance, but that's good if you don't like overpowering scents, or for people who have allergies."

Although the Kavchaks at one time grew 50 kinds of dahlias, they've recently had to downsize because of Bill's bad back.

"We just grow our favorites now," says Bill, 79, whose father maintained a large dahlia garden and greenhouse in the Greenfield section of Pittsburgh. "He sold dahlias from a little stand in front of the house. He'd put bouquets in buckets of water and a cigar box where you'd put your $2. It was the honor system."

The Kavchaks sponsor the annual William Kavchak Sr. Memorial Award for the best club flower — a variety chosen every year by the Dahlia Society as the one they want members to grow for the exhibit. This year, it is a dark-pink ball variety called 'Mary's Jomanda.'

Dahlias are as economical as they are beautiful because the tubers from which they grow can be stored all winter and replanted in spring. A tuber also can be divided into several smaller tubers, or cuttings, to develop new plants.

"One year, I wound up with 400 cuttings," says Bill, with a chuckle. "I couldn't find enough people to give them to."

Tubers typically are planted around Memorial Day or in early June. With plenty of sunshine and water, they will begin to put out blooms in mid-August and will continue to produce until the first frost, according to Bob Romano, who plans to enter the upcoming competition with 60 to 80 dahlias from the hundreds he grows in his Robinson yard.

Romano, 62, says he has racked up numerous awards in various competitions over the years and has hybridized at least 50 named varieties, several of which are registered and available for purchase all over the world.

The names are prefaced by Windhaven and include 'Premier,' 'Highlight,' 'Blush,' 'Victory' and 'Quasar.'

"'Highlight' might be my favorite," Romano says. "It's an incurved cactus dahlia with 8-inch blooms, and it's the color of a yellow highlighter. It's a real standout."

Romano was introduced to dahlias years ago by a neighbor whose plants he admired.

"He gave me some tubers, but I managed to lose most of them when I tried to store them over the winter, so he gave me more," Romano says. "Eventually, he steered me toward the Dahlia Society and to their tuber auction in spring. I joined the society and obtained better tubers and got mentored by the group."

Even with guidance, though, growing vibrant dahlias can be a matter of trial and error, he says

"What grows in one garden might not grow in someone else's because dahlias are sensitive to every micro-environment. You have to find out what works for you."

Though dahlias will grow in almost any type of soil, fertilization is the key to dazzling blooms, says Romano, who works as a biochemist and mixes his own formulas. For the average grower, he recommends a 10-10-10 fertilizer applied by the handful to each plant every two weeks and thoroughly watered into the soil.

Gardeners who want to store dahlias for the next growing season should dig up their tubers toward the end of October, while the weather is still nice, says Romano. He suggests gently washing tubers and allowing them to air dry, and then cutting them into halves or fourths, removing the stem and being careful to include an eye and crown with each piece. Romano uses vermiculite to cover the tubers in containers in a cool basement or garage.

Because dahlias can grow to 5 or more feet tall, they must be fastened to stakes to stay upright, says Romano, who uses metal bars. Late summer and early fall are when dahlias bring a visual treat.

"They look so bold and bright at this time of year and can be gorgeous in October," Romano says. "An artist comes to my garden every year in fall to paint watercolors."

POURED CONCRETE WALLS

Pouring concrete basements takes considerably less time than block construction. "Roughing in" can begin sooner. Ready-Mixed concrete can also adapt to cold weather construction, giving builders an extended construction season. Poured concrete doesn't cost as much as you think. Controlling costs is one of the biggest concerns of builders and buyers. Efficient modern construction methods make poured wall basements cost competitive with block walls. When you consider all that solid concrete basements have to offer at a comparable price, why look any further?

Nurserymen reveal favorite underused plants

FAVORITES • FROM D1

It will thrive in sun or part shade and is drought-tolerant. Getting this plant and most others off on the right foot is critical to their success.

“When you first plant them, get them established well,” he says. “Give them water and a little TLC to start off with.”

One of the joys of his business is meeting with customers to create something special for their landscape.

“Getting them to know the different plants and options that they have, it’s fun,” Bedner says. “You can actually teach them along the way. It’s fun to help them succeed in what they want their house to look like.”

He’s known may of those customers since childhood.

“You get to know them by their first name,” he says with a smile. “It’s like a friend.”

Perennial euphorbia is another plant he guides his customers toward.

“It’s one of my favorites,” he says. “They come in all different colors and heights; one in particular is ‘Tiny Tim.’ The flower on it is amazing. It gets a cluster of flowers that almost look like buttercups in the spring.”

Pulmonaria is another favorite. “It’s more of a shade-loving plant,” he says. “It has a very nice variegated leaf, then it gets a purple flower.”

Another shade or part-sun plant is heuchera.

“I like ‘Palace Purple,’” he says. “It’s one of the older varieties, but the color and the veining in the leaves is very nice.”

Bedner is also focusing on pollinator plants as part of the Million Pollinator Garden Challenge, a campaign to register a million public and private gardens and landscapes that support pollinators.

“One in three bites of food comes from a pollinator,” he says. “That is very important for our food supply.”

Ratibida columnifera, or Mexican hat plant, is a native that grows about 2 feet tall and has small flowers he describes as a cross between black-eyed Susans and cone-flowers. “The birds, bees and butterflies all love it,” he says.

Kalimeris incisa ‘Blue Star’ is another native. It produces pretty asterlike flowers from June until September and grows nearly 18 inches tall.

“If you shear it back after the initial bloom, you’ll get a rebloom later in the season,” Bedner says.

Bedner is driven to sell plants that are good for both gardener and environment.

“That’s one of our main goals here,” he says. “You want to supply not only a nice a garden for your customers, you want to be involved with your surroundings, too — knowing that you’re helping it to thrive.”

Chapon’s Greenhouse, Baldwin

Pete Chapon has a cardboard box filled with a plant he just dug out of his wife Lori’s garden. The owner and manager of Chapon’s Greenhouse in Baldwin had a little explaining to do as he told her he was giving one of his treasured irises to me.

“One of my all-time favorite plants is the zebra iris (Iris pallida),” he says. “I like it for two reasons. You get a real nice flush of blooms in the spring — light purple, and the foliage is variegated. It’s not the green and white that you typically see. It’s green and gold with a large gold stripe on it.”

‘Purple de Oro’

Anemone ‘Pocahontas’

He’s been part of the nursery since his parents started it 44 years ago and has seen plants come and go. There are still customers shopping here who have returned season after season from their first year in business. Helping people, he says, is one of the best things about his job.

“You can save them some time and maybe some heartaches, because some plants, they need a little more care. If you can talk to the customer and see what they are trying to accomplish with the plants, you can make some nice recommendations.”

The greenhouse is still filled with mandevillas, one of his favorites. “They’ve come out with a lot of new colors,” he says.

When he travels to trade shows, Chapon doesn’t need to worry about watering the plant, as the waxy leaves are able to stand some drought conditions. The plant can also be grown indoors all winter long in front of a large picture window or sliding glass door.

Trailing and hybrid portulaca are also on his list of plants that are nearly indestructible.

“I like them both because they don’t need much water,” he says. He’s also had good luck with the trailing type that’s self-sowing.

In his own garden, Chapon uses grasses, smaller penisetum types to make a nice display and taller miscanthus varieties for the back of the border. He loves zebra grass and Japanese variegated varieties and counts ‘Morning Light’ as one of his favorites.

“I never water them,” he says. “You only have to prune them once a year.”

He cuts his down in the spring because he enjoys the show they put on as they sway in the cold breezes of winter. It’s one plant that he can reliably say is deer-proof.

The only daylilies he’ll recommend are the reblooming varieties. He likes to mass one color for big impact in a bed.

“They have a big flush in the spring and periodic blooms for the rest of the season,” he says. “If you don’t deadhead them, you won’t get a lot of reblooms.”

‘Stella de Oro’ might be the most popular with its pretty yellow blooms, but there are other colors, including ‘Purple de Oro,’ which is just a bit taller than its cousin.

Shadyside Fair keeps artists linked to community

BY CANDY WILLIAMS

Sandra Klink of Bethel Park has been creating whimsical one-of-a-kind sculptures of insects, exotic lizards, dragons, monkeys and other Wondrous Creatures for 25 years.

The Carnegie Mellon University graduate with a fine-arts degree began fashioning her unique wire-framed pieces from metallic fabric, hand-painted silk and decorative embellishments when her three children, now grown, were young.

“Back then, it kept me sane,” she says.

Today — with six grandchildren ages 2 to 10 and creations that are featured in galleries and private collections from Florida to California — the award-winning artist says she is thrilled when she sees their faces light up when they discover a new creature she has crafted.

“I have been lucky to do something that makes people smile,” she says.

Klink will be among more than 100 regional and national artists and crafters displaying their works in clay, fiber, wood, jewelry, glass, metal, mixed media and two-dimensional art from Sept. 9 to 11 at the 47th anniversary of A Fair in the Park presented by the Craftsmen’s Guild of Pittsburgh.

“I’ve enjoyed doing this show,” Klink says. “It’s the only local show I do. Over the years, you create a clientele that comes back each year to see what’s new.”

Her sculptured pieces range in size “from minute to monumental,” some nearly 4 feet tall, with a price range from $35 to $2,600.

This year’s edition of A Fair in the Park is led by a new director, Carrie Nardini of Brookline, who has attended the show “as a shopper” for years. She has dabbled in various crafts but says she eventually decided she was more of an artist organizer than an artist.

Nardini has helped other artists and crafters as co-founder of I Made It! Market, a local nomadic indie crafts marketplace launched in 2007. She also co-founded Neighborhood Flea, an urban flea market in the Strip District, in 2014.

“A Fair in the Park is really a tradition in Pittsburgh,” she says. “You can meet the artists and find incredible works for sale. It’s definitely a celebration of fine arts and crafts.”

Another exhibitor, Laurie Leonard of Penn Township, will have an assortment of her handmade jewelry featuring miniature reproductions of her watercolor paintings in pewter settings cast from original clay models.

Leonard, who serves as secretary on the Craftsmen’s Guild board of directors, says the jury process for accepting exhibitors into

A Fair in the Park is very strict. More than 50 percent of the artists selected to participate live within 100 miles of Pittsburgh; the rest are chosen from those who apply from all over the country.

“We can be very picky,” she says. “It really makes for a nice show with a variety of mediums represented.”

Eric Zawrotny of Brighton Heights, a digital-art director who paints watercolors of wildlife on birch or basswood panels, is in his fourth year with A Fair in the Park. He says he is especially drawn to painting foxes and coyotes, and his creative philosophy is fairly simple.

“Just make cool stuff that you believe in,” he says. “It doesn’t have to be trendy, highly conceptual, or earth-shatteringly new and original. If you make it good enough, someone is going to want it.”

Nardini says a new addition to this year’s show will be a second stage to accommodate more live entertainment. Featured performers include musicians from Calliope, the Pittsburgh Folk Music Society on Sept. 9; Abbots Cross, Olga Watkins Band and Blended Reality on Sept. 10, and Matt Miski, RML Jazz and Aron Honick on Sept. 11.

Children’s activities will be provided by Pittsburgh Center for the Arts, the Andy Warhol Museum, the Frick Art & Historical Center, Artist & Craftsman Supply, Calliope, Hatch Art Studio, Kentucky Avenue School and Sunburst School of Music.

There will be on-site demonstrations by various artists and craftsmen and 50 food trucks. An estimated 20,000 visitors are expected to attend the fair, which will take place rain or shine.

INSIDE WESTMORELAND ARTS

Cafe is like hanging out at funky home

BY SHIRLEY MCMARLIN

The Keynote Cafe in Jeannette is more than a business for owner Jill Sorrels. It’s an extension of her living room, an arts incubator and a symbol of the city’s will to survive. The performance space was first located on Clay Avenue, closed for a time, and reopened almost three years ago at 227 Fourth St. Sorrels, a third-generation Jeannette resident, is mom to Mia, an artist in Brooklyn, N.Y., and Samuel, a musician in Los Angeles.

Question: How did you get into the music business?

Answer: It’s kind of sad, but I got divorced. My former husband played guitar and sang beautifully. On Saturday night, all our friends were at our house and everyone sat around and played and sang. It was heavenly. About a year-and-a-half (after the divorce), I just missed the music so much that I thought, “What if I opened a little place with four or five booths and a guy in the corner playing guitar, would any of my old friends come back and play?”

“(When the Clay Avenue location opened), I thought, ‘I’ll give this six months and, when it doesn’t work, I’ll tuck my tail between my legs and skulk away and nobody will even remember that I was there.’ I had no idea what would come, and it was like a rocket ship taking off.

Q: What happened?

A: Ten years ago, there wasn’t a lot of live music in Westmoreland County. So when I opened up, musicians came and made it their home and amateurs turned into professionals. Guys who were playing in their living rooms came down and started playing and hooking up with other musicians. Before you knew it, they were coming down and playing every weekend, and people started hearing about what we were doing.

Q: How would you describe what you do?

A: We’re just a little local place that likes to make music and be surrounded by artwork. People pay a cover at the door, and then we order pizza and make a big salad. We have cookies and soft drinks. Everybody helps themselves. So for $10 you can come in, see a show, eat as much pizza as you want and buy some artwork if you so desire. My accountant says, ‘People pay you to come into your living room.’ And that’s pretty much what it is.

Q: What’s the schedule like?

A: Thursday night is always open-mic night. Then we pull from those open-mic nights to create Friday and Saturday shows. We’ll do a jazz show or a blues show, a classic-rock show or an under-21 show. Last weekend, we had metal music and tonight (Sept. 2) is Christian rock. Every weekend is something different. Because we’re not a bar — we’re a performance venue — kids of all ages can come. Kids are coming in at 13 and 14 with their own bands.

Q: You mentioned that you have artwork.

A: We do art openings every three to four months. About 50 local artists bring their work down. I don’t charge to hang and don’t take a commission when it sells.

Q: Are you a musician yourself?

A: Almost everybody in my family is either an artist or a musician, but I got the business side of things. My father owned Urbani’s Healthland in Jeannette for almost 35 years. My father’s parents came over from Italy, and they had multiple businesses at the turn of the century when things were really going well here. I’ve owned a maid service for 25 years, and that’s how I really make my living. This is what I do for fun.

Q: I notice that you say “we” when you talk about the cafe?

A: The biggest thing you could say about the Keynote is that it isn’t about me, it’s truly about a whole community of people that built this place and make it what it is.

When we moved onto this little block of Fourth Street, there were only four businesses and a little church. There’s 14 businesses on this block now. There isn’t an empty storefront or an empty apartment. When the mills and the glass houses went down, my dad told me, it will take an entire generation for this town to come back. He was right — it’s taken an entire generation and then some, but little by little, block by block, the town is coming back.

‘Sully’ gets lift from Hanks, Eastwood, script

Films based on real events and characters have not drummed up much box-office business.

REVIEW

‘Sully’

» Wide release

When audiences know how the story ends, they’re hesitant to plop down the price of admission to watch the inevitable.

Enter the next film in the genre, “Sully.” It’s the big-screen adaptation of the January 2009 event when Chesley “Sully” Sullenberger landed his damaged plane in the Hudson River and saved the lives of 155 souls on board.

The film, directed by Clint Eastwood, shows the flight and water landing but mostly focuses on the immediate aftermath — from the nightmares the crew had to the investigation that suggested Sullenberger’s actions might not have been as heroic as people thought.

You would have had to be living in a cave to not know how this story ends. Despite being armed with that knowledge, the film delivers a compelling story of what it means to make monumental decisions without time to think, the real difference between a hero and someone doing their job and how even the strongest people in a crisis can eventually doubt themselves.

WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Tom Hanks turns in another remarkable performance as the heroic pilot, taking on another role as an everyday person pressed into extraordinary actions. Hanks has a wonderful knack for playing the everyman. It’s a tough role because the real Sullenberger is such a low-key person. Hanks has to show a broad range of emotions while trapped within the limitations of the role. He can turn a single look into a moment of joy or a cry for help.

land examination of a new species of frog. But the reality is that this woman is a facile shape-shifter.

Directed by Joshua Marston (“Maria Full of Grace” and co-writer of the script with Julian Sheppard), “Complete Unknown” does more than divert in a slyly implausible way.

The film raises provocative questions about what is real in life and what is not, about whether embracing radical change creates a sense of possibility or amounts to betrayal, to running away.

None of this would be possible, of course, without Weisz and her intoxicating movie-star performance.

“Complete Unknown’s” other key player is Tom, artfully played by Shannon, a serious guy who works at a nonprofit think tank.

As soon as Tom sees Alice, he can’t shake the feeling that he’s seen her before.

Gradually, “Complete Unknown” manages things so that Tom and Alice can spend time alone, and the film deftly turns, even given the presence of supporting actors Kathy Bates and Danny Glover, into an increasingly intimate two-hander.

Their skill and the careful way Marston unfolds their story turns what could have been merely a device into something that is considerably more.
