A Washington County woman lies on the floor of her bedroom after overdosing on heroin in December. EMS workers with Washington Ambulance & Chair administered Narcan within minutes to save her life.

PULLED BACK FROM THE EDGE

INSIDE ONE WOMAN'S STRUGGLE WITH ADDICTION, NEAR-FATAL OVERDOSE

Editor's note: In late 2016, Trib Guza and Andrew Russell set out to chronicle the opioid crisis in Pennsylvania. To help them understand the impact of the epidemic Washington County-based Ambulance & Chair granted them permission to ride along with paramedics on one of the many overdose calls they attend to every week. About 7:40 p.m. Dec. 2, Guza and Russell watched as paramedics revived a woman who had just used three stamp bags of heroin. The woman, a former nursing assistant, later recounted her addiction to prescription painkillers and ĥeroin in face-toface meetings. She requested that her name not be used to protect her and her family from the stigma attached to addiction. Here is her story.

STORY BY MEGAN GUZA AND PHOTOS BY ANDREW RUSSELL

She knew the signs of addiction: She was a nursing assistant for years. She knew about the shakes, the constant swings of hot and cold. She knew painkillers could become a gateway to illegal drug use, namely heroin.

She knew heroin could kill, but she also knew that addicts don't think about that. They think only about their next fix.

She didn't know she was overdosing

She didn't realize heroin nearly killed her until paramedics revived her with the overdose-reversal drug Narcan.

A month later, she is almost sheepish when she says she was scared that night, when paramedics rushed to the Washington County mobile home park where she lives.

She ducks her head and raises her eyes. "Well, yeah."

"Forty-three-year-old female. Possible overdose.'

The warped voice through the dispatch radio crackled through the relative silence of the Washington Street in Washington.

Medics Evan Vogel and Levi Graham headed for the ambulance, as the dispatcher relayed that the woman was barely breathing.

"I was on the phone asking if she wanted pizza, then she stopped talking," cried her daughter, who lives five minutes away. Fearing the worst, her daughter rushed over. The chaos was contained to outside the mobile home. Inside the woman's bedroom, it was calm and methodical.

Vogel and Graham found a pulse. They administered a nasal spray dosage of the overdose-reversal drug Narcan. It works faster than an injection, they said, because the nasal passages allow quicker access for the drug to begin working.

An uncapped svringe and a spoon sat on the nightstand. Buddy, the woman's beagle, kept trying to barge into the bedroom where she lay on the floor.

Eventually, she awoke.

Wecht: Teen in killing could have survived

Victim in selfie case lived 45-60 minutes, he testifies

BY RICH CHOLODOFSKY

During the time Maxwell Morton posed for a selfie with a teen friend he is accused of fatally shooting and fled to hide the suspected murder weapon, the victim could have been saved, according to a witness on the second day of trial testimony.

Dr. Cyril Wecht, a forensic pathologist, told jurors that Ryan Mangan, 16, did not immediately Mc. die. "He wound under his left eye, an injury that led him to slowly suffocate as blood drained into his lungs, Wecht said. The wound itself caused no fatal brain or spinal injuries, he said.

But instead of helping his friend, Morton used a cellphone to take a picture of himself smiling in front of Mangan's body, which was slumped in a chair, before fleeing the scene without attempting to get help for his dying friend, Westmoreland County District Attorney John Peck contends.

Jurors got their first view of the selfie Wednesday as a Wisconsin teen who was sent the image by Morton over social media testified.

Tanner Porter, 17, of Springville, Wis., told jurors Morton bragged about the killing as they played an online video game.

Porter said he and Morton had played online together for about five years but had not been in contact for the previous eight months. Morton's online name "Chicken98" suddenly popped employed a housekeeper who was in the country illegally.

New frustrations hit Trump administration

'After careful consideration and discussions with my family, I am withdrawing my nomination for secretary of Labor," Puzder said in a statement emailed by his spokesman. "I am honored to have been considered by President Donald Trump to lead the Department of Labor and put America's workers and businesses back on a path to sustainable prosperity.

"While I won't be serving in the administration, I fully support the president and his highly qualified team,' Puzder said.

knock out one of Trump's Cabideration is good news for hard-working Americans across the country," said Sen. Elizabeth Warren, D-Mass. "It's time for President Trump to stop looking out for his billionaire buddies and name a secretary of Labor who will stand up for workers.

The collapse of Puzder's nomination adds to what was already the toughest week of Trump's young presidency. After seeing his controversial travel ban blocked by federal courts last week, Trump lost one of his early key supporters with the forced resignation Monday night of Michael Flynn.

The former national security adviser was pushed out over false statements he made about his December contacts with a Russian diplomat.

Waning GOP support for Puzder was also a sign that Republicans on Capitol Hill who had previously been reluctant to confront Trump over policy or Cabinet appointments stand up to the new president. thanks only to a tiebreaking vote from Vice President Mike Pence after two Republicans voted against her.

White House officials appear to have concluded that it was not worth their political capital to fight for Puzder's nomination. Trump issued no statement Wednesday regarding Puzder's decision.

White House press secretary Sean Spicer blamed Senate Democrats for delaying and politicizing the confirmation process.

Puzder, 66, helped CKE Restaurants overcome severe financial difficulties in the 1990s before becoming chief executive in 2000. He raised the profile of Carl's Jr. and Hardee's with ads featuring scantily clad women eating oversized hamburgers.

Just as with his burger ads, Puzder often opted to be provocative, including musing about the benefits of increased automation in his restaurants.

In an interview last year with Fortune magazine, he noted that machines are "always polite, they always upsell, they never take a vacation, they never show up late, there's never a slip-and-fall or an age, sex or race discrimination case."

Democrats targeted Puzder – who had served as an economic adviser to Trump's campaign — for defeat. And opponents got extra time to build the case after several delays in his confirmation hearing as senators awaited his ethics as they succeeded in helping — are feeling emboldened to and financial disclosure forms.

Last week, Puzder admit-Education Secretary Betsy Detect that he had employed a "His withdrawal from con- Vos was confirmed last week housekeeper for years who was in the United States illegally. Puzder only paid back taxes related to the employee after being selected by Trump the White House budget office cleared a Senate hurdle Wednesday, though a senior Republican appears unlikely to support him. Rep. Mick Mulvaney is a Tea Party lawmaker from South Carolina who has attracted opposition from Armed Services Committee Chairman John McCain, R-Ariz. McCain says Mulvaney's record of support for military operations in Afghanistan and the Pentagon budget generally is too soft.

 Collins announced she's going to vote against Trump's nominee to lead the Environmental Protection Agency. Collins told Maine Public that she has "significant concerns" over Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt's active opposition to EPA policy and his lawsuits against the agency on policies important to Maine, like mercury controls for coal-fired plants and efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Scottdale man arraigned in violent crash

Driver faces multiple charges in Mother's Day incident

BY PAUL PEIRCE

A Scottdale man was driving atleast71mphonRoute119near Youngwood when his pickup slammed into a family's car as they drove to church on Mother's Day last year, seriously injuring all four, according to state police.

Matthew Marshall Murphy, 24, was arraigned Wednesday on three counts of aggravated assault by vehicle and additional charges of simple assault, reckless endangerment and traffic violations in the May 8 crash in Hempfield, just south of the borough.

Vicky and William Schuler of Scottdale and their sons, Gavin, 2, and Austin, 1, were heading north into Youngwood when their car was struck from behind and crushed by Murphy's pickup just after 10 a.m., police said.

During his arraignment, Murphy told Youngwood District Judge Anthony Bompiani he was headed to a relative's home to pick up picnic tables to take to Scottdale for a Mother's Day celebration when the crash occurred.

After Trooper Kimberly Zubovic testified that Murphy, a union carpenter, has cooperated during the nine-month investigation and has no prior criminal record, Bompiani agreed to allow him to remain free on $25,000 unsecured bond.

Bompiani warned Murphy that he must appear at all future court proceedings.

'Give me any reason, and I'll revoke this bond. The allegations contained in this complaint and the results are horrible. And you are to have no contact with the victims," Bompiani said. He scheduled Murphy's preliminary hearing for March 7. Murphy declined to talk to

Stolen puppies returned to shelter

All 4 found at Jeannette home of teens who tried to adopt one, police say

BY MATTHEW SANTONI

Four puppies were returned safely to a South Huntingdon shelter after being stolen overnight, a shelter official said Wednesday.

Sarah Jo Smith, director of the Pet Adoption League, said two people broke into the nonprofit, no-kill shelter on Spring Street around 11 p.m. Monday and removed one of the 8-week-old Doberman mix puppies. They returned around 1:15 a.m. for three other puppies in the litter. Shelter staff discovered they were missing Tuesday. Though surveillance videos didn't show their faces clearly, Smith told police she suspected they were taken by a teenage couple who had applied to adopt one of the puppies earlier that day. The application was rejected because the teens live with parents who needed to be included in the adoption screening process, Smith said.

Based on the shelter's information, Trooper Adam Mylant tracked down the puppies at the male suspect's home in Jeannette, where his father turned the puppies over, Smith said. Mylant returned the litter to the shelter by 11 p.m. Tuesday.

"This officer went above and beyond," Smith said. "The puppies peed and pooped all over his car.'

Smith said the female suspect is a former shelter volunteer. She and the male suspect were found during Mylant's search, and no charges had been filed as of Wednesday.

Smith valued the puppies at $300 each, based on the shelter's puppy adoption fees that cover spaying or neutering, microchips and vaccinations.

Norwin eyes tax hikes, program cuts

Rising pension, health care, cyber school costs cited in preliminary budget analysis

BY JOE NAPSHA

An increase in pension, health care and cyber school costs coupled with only a slight increase in state aid may push the Norwin School Board to raise property taxes by 2.41 mills in the 2017-18 school year to help cover a projected deficit of $2.2 million, according to a preliminary budget analysis.

District officials are projecting expenses of $70.8 million but anticipate generating $68.6 million in revenue with the current tax rate of 75.20 mills in the Westmoreland County portion of the district, Jude Abraham, Norwin's interim director of business affairs, told the school board at Monday's workshop ses-

Abraham said. 'The situation we are in is not unique. Public education is really at risk. There is no way we can sus-without further funding from the education subsidies, but its transstate, Superintendent William Kerr told the board.

Because of the deficit, the district will have to consider reducing the number of administrators through retirement or attrition, Abraham said, as well as cuts in music, art and family consumer science, formerly known as home economics. Norwin also may have to consider subcontracting some services, he said.

The district has been restructuring and realigning its resources, but that can't continue "without hurting students and programs," Kerr said.

Norwin can raise real estate taxes as much as 2.41 mills in Westmoreland County, equal to 3.3 percent, the maximum permitted under the state's index. That would generate about $924,200 in revenue, Abraham

The district raised property taxes in North Huntingdon, Irwin and North Irwin by 2.25 mills for the 2016-17 school year. Norwin anticipated receiving $27,200 in revenue by raising taxes in the Allegheny County portion of the district — fewer than 20 residences in South Versailles by 1.69 mills to 11.68 mills.

Under Gov. Tom Wolf's budget proposal for 2017-18, Norwin would receive a $116,000 increase in basic portation reimbursement would be reduced, Abraham said. The district will look at other options for raising revenue, including hiking the fees it charges outside groups to use school facilities such as the stadium and gymnasium, Kerr said. "I think it is safe to say that everything is on the table," Kerr said.

The big drivers in the deficit are the district's $990,000 contribution to the Public School Employees' Retirement System, health care insurance, cyber and charter school costs, special education, cost-of-living allowances and transportation, Abraham

Norwin's contribution to the state retirement system has increased about $1 million over the past four years, said Robert Perkins, school board president.

Perkins blamed the state for the financial difficulties, saying "they've done nothing to control charter school (costs) or PSERS.'

Abraham expects school officials will know more by mid-March about the budget for next school year.

Palmer airport may get new exit

Large window may be converted into doorway before expansion project

BY JEFF HIMLER

A new exit for arriving passengers at Arnold Palmer Regional Airport is among smaller efforts being considered to enhance operations before pursuing a longer-term terminal expansion at the Unity facility.

The Westmoreland County Airport Authority board was receptive Tuesday when Executive Director Gabe Monzo and board member Mark Gera discussed moving forward separately with the new exit, which otherwise would be included in the expansion project of $8 million or more.

Airport planners are proposing to convert a large window into a doorway so arriving passengers can proceed from the baggage claim area to the parking lot without having to cross paths with those entering the terminal.

"It's really needed," Chairwoman Janice Smarto said of the exit.

"It doesn't seem like a major project," Monzo said, indicating funds are available through an authority bond issue to cover the estimated $50,000 cost. He said it wouldn't take long for the authority to prepare bid documents for the project.

Monzo said he would look for other funding sources to help with the suggested purchase of a portable stair truck, at a cost of about $150,000, to help passengers with physical handicaps disembark from planes. The airport's single passenger bridge can accommodate wheelchair-bound passengers. If a second plane arrives at the same time, airport staff must use a manual stair chair to help such passengers from the plane to the terminal.

The truck "has a handicapped lift built into it," he said. "We feel this would be a great help to us through our transition years until we get our (expanded) terminal built.'

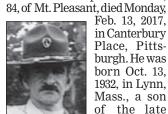

The authority also accepted completed improvements updated camera equipment, radios and data connectivity and storage to enhance airport security at a cost of $115,750 and rehabilitation of taxiway pavement at Rostraver Airport at a cost of $92,521.

Monzo announced tickets for the 2017 Shop'n Save Westmoreland County Airshow June 24-25 at the Arnold Palmer airport can be purchased through the grocery chain or at palmerairport. com. A VIP show pass including food and a commemorative coin honoring Palmer, the late Latrobe golfing legend and authority member, also may be purchased.

Nurse's caring attitude permeated her life

BY STEPHEN HUBA

A nurse by profession, Betsy McFarland lived a life of selfless devotion to others whether she was working, taking care of her husband or spending time with family and friends.

"She loved to be with her friends and had many of them. She was a kind and generous person," said Becky Halfhill of Scottdale. "She was always taking care of somebody."

Halfhill and Mrs. McFarland met in first grade, graduated together from Mt. Pleasant High School in 1966 and stayed friends throughout their lives. They recently helped organize their 50th class reunion but regularly had smaller reunions with close friends. We would get together once or twice a year and meet someplace halfway and shop and eat out and reminisce and have a wonderful time," Halfhill said. Betsy J. (Coldsmith) McFarland of Mt. Pleasant died Sunday, Feb. 12, 2017, at UPMC Montefiore in Pittsburgh after a brief battle with cancer. She was 68. Mrs. McFarland was born Nov. 9, at home. It has the only people who did not like Susan were the ones who did not meet her," to the point that it was a refrain. Susan, who had a multitude of serious, and several times in her life, almost life-ending health crises due to complications from her congenital heart condition, refused to be defined by it. Born the day before Valentine's Day in 1969 and raised on Maple Avenue in Edgewood, she attended Edgewood schools, ultimately graduating from Woodland Hills/ Swissvale in 1986. She went on to pursue an engineering degree at Penn State University Park. While at Penn State, she was drawn to a field that she had spent so much time involved with, and ultimately graduated in health policy and administration in 1991. While attending Penn State, she was vice president of student government, active in "Skull and Bones," and a founding sister of Gamma Delta Chapter of Delta Zeta Sorority. Following her graduation, she attended St. Margaret Hospital School of Nursing, and in 1994, Susan graduated to become a registered nurse. She spent many years giving back to the same community that had given her so much by being a pediatric nurse at Holy Name Hospital of New Jersey, and Pittsburgh Children's Hospital (in its prior location in the Oakland section of Pittsburgh). Ultimately, Susan went into medical management, and worked in a combination of this field and information technology, first with Coventry Healthcare, and ultimately (as acquired by) Aetna, where she continued to work as a health care quality manager project manager through her latest setback. Susan frequently stunned her physicians, both recent and those who had taken care of her for decades, with her resilience and will to live, as well as her ability to carry on. While Susan's sharp mind and wit, yet loving personality and unending hospitality were an asset anywhere, food shopping and preparation of meals for family gatherings, as well as those closest to her, were her greatest love. She was, on top of everything else, an amazing cook, whose greatest passion was expressing her love through a platter of delicious fare. PEELING BACK OBAMA'S 'ONION'

It's going to take time

■ he good news is that President Donald Trump has begun to peel back the massive regulatory onion that the Obama administration dumped on the economy. The bad news is that an effective rollback could take considerable time.

Last year alone Team Obama issued more than 3,800 rules. Just the so-called "midnight" regulations issued near the end of Barack Obama's presidency cost an estimated $157 billion, according to the American Action Forum.

Under an executive order by Mr. Trump, every new regulation proposed by a federal agency, such as the Labor Department, has to be followed by eliminating two existing regulations, The Washington Times reports. Trouble is, it's the type of rules, not just the sheer volume of regulations cut, that matters.

"It is important to focus on eliminating the equivalent regulatory burden rather than a specific number of regulations," says Clyde Wayne Crews of the Competitive Enterprise Institute.

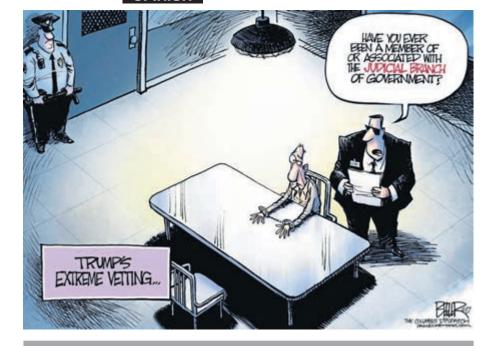

Under Trump's order, government agencies will have a "cost cap" set by the Office of Management and Budget; agencies will be barred from issuing new rules after reaching their caps.

Naturally, liberal elites insist that the regulatory rollback will wreak havoc; some advocacy groups are suing the Trump administration over the president's executive order. But for all their handwringing, nothing's going to happen overnight.

After all, it took Mr. Obama years to build up this veritable mountain of federal red tape.

The Thursday wrap

Depending on one's perspective, approval of the 306-mile Mariner East 2 pipeline by the Department of Environmental Protection is either great news or cause for grave concern. Pending approval from the Army Corps of Engineers, the 20-inch pipeline will be built parallel to Sunoco Logistics' Mariner East line, crossing 36 miles (about 270 properties) in Westmoreland County. Of course, safety is a paramount consideration. But so, too, is eminent domain. Here's hoping that at some future date, all sides can agree that Mariner East 2 was done right. ... Allegations of dirty laundry, or more accurately, dirty linens, have focused attention on the cleanliness of bedsheets cleaned by a company that's now facing a lawsuit. This, stemming from the UPMC mold crisis. Paris Healthcare Linen Services and UPMC are being sued by attorneys, who say postoperative fungal infections led to the deaths of two patients at UPMC Presbyterian and Montefiore hospitals. A closer look at hospital linens is in order. It is nevertheless unsettling that something so rudimentary — the cleanliness of bedsheets — has been brought into question and is now the subject of litigation. ... A nearly $10 million cash infusion from the Federal Communications Commission's broadcast incentive auction will "get us out of the hole," says WQED Multimedia President and CEO Deborah Acklin. America's first local public broadcasting TV station has endured years of layoffs. But out of the hole is not necessarily out of the woods. WQED still needs the public's support. And that means finding and sustaining programming that resonates with viewers.

Trump & protesters

ecently, thousands of demonstrators protested at airports and other public places across the nation against President Trump's temporary ban on travel for citizens from certain countries with Muslim majorities.

I wonder if these same protesters were infuriated by the terrorist actions in the World Trade Center truck bombing, the 9/11 attacks in New York City, Washington, D.C., and Western Pennsylvania, and the bombing at the Boston Marathon, Somehow, the barbaric mass killings of innocent Americans by terrorists do not seem to anger these leftist demonstrators as much as an executive order that didn't harm a single person and inconvenienced a few.

These demonstrations appear to be part of a well-organized movement that recruits, trains and pays professional protesters, bankrolled by wealthy patrons like George Soros to provoke civil disobedience in order to intimidate the majority of us to comply with their radical goals. Their provocative techniques were invented by radical community organizer Saul Alinsky, who developed confrontational methods for leftist activists to coerce Americans to do their

In June 2015, Donald Trump announced that he would run for the Republican nomination for president. I guessed he would drop out after about three months. I, along with many others, was shocked when he won the nomination in spite of some of the comments that left many shaking their heads. I figured Hillary Clinton, even though I could never vote for her, was a shoo-in for president, especially after some more stupid comments coming from Trump.

I was stunned by his victory. I miscalculated the mood of the voters. It was a vote against Hillary, against the Obama agenda and clearly against Washington and career politicians.

Since Trump's election, many Americans have staged protests against him and some of his policies. The policies he is trying to initiate are policies the voters wanted, and they are why he was elected.

I would assume those protesting the most and causing some of the destruction are those who didn't vote for Trump and want America to continue the path that Barack Obama started. I didn't like that path, but I didn't go to the streets and cause damage. I tried to work through our political system to get changes.

Over the past decade, I have heard many liberals preach about accepting others. However, I have noticed that liberals are very intolerant of anyone who doesn't think the way they do.

onald Trump as a real estate deal maker thrived on chaos creating and then exploiting it to achieve his goals. Now as president, Mr. Trump is upsetting allies and disrupting international security and economic arrangements to deliver on his campaign promises to make Americans safer and more prosperous.

Since the end of World War II, presidents from both parties carefully cultivated NATO and other defense alliances in the Pacific and Middle East, and they built a network of multilateral and regional trade and investment agreements to promote democracy, human rights and free-market capitalism. Most U.S. allies have been unwilling to make the same sacrifices as the United States to defend the frontiers of freedom and build a strong Western economy where everyone may prosper.

Over the years America's two biggest allies, Germany and Japan, pursued selfish economic policies based on exports exceeding

States and other nations must have trade deficits — and this mightily penalizes investment, R&D and economic growth in the United States and many other economies. Today, broad swaths of America's industrial heartland are impoverished thanks to U.S. presidents appeasing mercantilism. The United States simply cannot carry the load. President Obama recognized the limits of American resources and sought to circumscribe U.S. mili-

to U.S. security, encourage allies

tary engagement to direct threats to do more and maximize regional contributions — for example, his diplomacy urged Germany, Japan and others to commit more to defense, and he relied on Iraqi and insurgent forces to combat ISIS and Syrian dictator Bashar Assad. Similarly, through diplomacy Obama sought to open foreign markets in Asia to rev up U.S. exports and growth. By and large Obama failed.

The Germans, Japanese and others still spend too little and expect America's military to stand in harm's way to defend their freedoms. Russia is extending influence by exploiting the increasing void left by the United States in the Middle East. China is seizing sovereignty over vast areas in the South China Sea.

Americans and Western Europeans have been subjected to terrorism by Islamic extremists. Meanwhile Obama failed to open foreign markets, accelerate economic growth and create enough decent paying jobs.

Trump is taking a much harder line with friend and foe alike, save Russia. By warning Europe to do more for its own defense or risk losing American protection, seeking a deal with Russia on power sharing in Europe and the Middle East, and threatening China with huge tariffs and other economic sanctions, Trump is posing existential threats to NATO and the WTO, which are foundational arrangements of the Western alliance.

All this may be necessary to finally shake loose change and win concessions vital to American interests. But the Trump administration has not told us much about what the brave new world order to follow should look like.

Without goals, brinkmanship can easily serve destructive purposes — international security and economic arrangements do not function well in chaos.

Trump's reckless fits of policy could easily take much of the world, and America, into dystopia.

Congress, tariffs & trade

GEORGE F. WILL

WASHINGTON n theory, if only occasionally in fact, Congress plays a role when a president wants to initiate military hostilities. Republican Sen. Mike Lee of Utah thinks Congress should also have a say when a president wants to initiate a trade war.

Lee is eager for Congress to retrieve some of the power it has delegated to presidents. He proposes the Global Trade Accountability Act. It is analogous to the Regulations from the Executive in Need of Scrutiny (REINS) Act, which the House again passed Jan. 5. REINS would require

Congress to approve any major (at least $100 million cost) regulation. Lee notes that last year Congress passed 2,966 pages of laws while federal agencies were churning out 32 times that many (97,110) pages of regulations. His excellent proposal would, like REINS, leave Congress in a reactive posture, but at least able to react. Speaker Paul Ryan declares that "we're" — meaning Congress — "not going to be raising tariffs," but Congress has long since invested presidents with vast discretion regarding Tariffs are taxes imposed at the border. The Constitution says "Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises" and "to regulate commerce with foreign nations." Its Origination Clause says, "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House.'

Although all tariffs raise revenues, not all are primarily "for" that purpose. Some protect from competition some industries that the government decides to favor. So, by repeatedly, beginning with the 1917 Trading with the Enemy Act (TWEA), delegating to presidents the power to impose tariffs, Congress has empowered presidents to raise taxes. Lee's proposal would require congressional complicity in this core government function.

Without it, presidents can wield powers akin to those of a wartime commander in chief. Gary Clyde Hufbauer of the Peterson Institute for International Economics notes the TWEA is "the mother of all presidential powers over international trade." In 1933, newly inaugurated President Franklin Roosevelt's first act was to invoke a TWEA section never mind that the nation was not at war — to declare a national emergency and order a bank holiday, actions which were, as Hufbauer says, "at best remotely related to foreign commerce." Congress promptly extended the TWEA to cover national emergencies declared by presidents.

The current president could use the TWEA with impunity to legitimize tariffs, citing ongoing U.S. operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. The International Emergency Economic Powers Act of 1977, like the TWEA, and six other statutes give presidents vast power to regulate international commerce during an "unusual and extraordinary threat," which the current president thinks is the nation's current condition. And courts defer to presidents about emergencies.

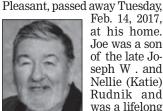

If Congress passes Lee's measure, and President Trump signs it, it will limit presidential discretion regarding trade wars and crimp the modern presidency's imperial swagger.

ADDICTION • FROM A1

"What's going on? Who are all these people?" she

When she realized they were paramedics, she said she knew what happened.

The Narcan made her nauseous — she vomited more than once in the ambulance on the way to the hospital. She didn't want to go, and she made the medics wait while she changed out of her clothes that were damp after friends used ice to try to revive her.

A month later, she explained that she normally would shoot six or seven stamp bags. She had taken three to be safe. It didn't matter.

"You don't know what's in it," she said. "But three bags, and I was out."

She started taking the pills innocently enough. Torn muscles and ligaments in her back, neck and shoulder from struggling to catch a falling patient caused immense pain that over-thecounter medication couldn't

Her fibromyalgia — a condition marked by full-body muscle pain — amplified everything. Narcotics often are prescribed for pain brought on by the condition or such extensive injuries.

What started as a way to control the pain became an addiction and led to the unending fight to stave off the even worse pain of dopesickness — withdrawal from the opioids.

Doctors don't start you on the "strong stuff," she said. She started taking painkillers such as Percocet and Vicodin and eventually moved up to Opana, the brand name for oxymorphone. Single doses generally range from 10 to 20 milligrams every four to six hours. She was taking up to 140 milligrams at a time.

From there, her addiction spiraled.

"If I didn't have them, I knew something was wrong," she said. "I knew it was withdrawal. I'd sit here and shake. I'd be hot, cold, hot, cold."

Starting "a couple years ago," she would take too many pills and run out, leaving her searching for a fix until she could refill her prescription. That's when she would turn to heroin. She said she knew it was a slippery slope. "I knew I was already an addict. What was I going to do?" she said.

Her path to heroin is well

On average, more than 650,000 opioid prescriptions are written each day across the country, and nearly 4,000 people start taking them recreationally daily, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Nearly half of all adults who use heroin reported they first abused prescription painkillers, according to a National Institute on Drug Abuse survey. Some reported switching to heroin because it's easier: easier to find, buy and afford.

"Of the last 2,000 new users I've talked to in Western Pennsylvania, I'd say about 90 percent tell me they started with prescription pills," said Dr. Neil A. Capretto, medical director at Beaver County-based Gateway Rehab.

Many start on opioid painkillers for legitimate reasons.

"Some come off it, but some get trapped on it, find they need more and get addicted," he said.

Alternative: Their supply runs out, they can't get a prescription, they can't afford to buy them on the street.

A Washington County woman is treated by Washington Ambulance & Chair EMS workers Levi Graham (left) and Evan Vogel after she overdosed on heroin.

Withdrawal grips them, and they turn to the alternative - heroin — to stave it off.

Seventy-three people died because of overdoses in Washington County in 2015, the most recent year for which data were available. That was a 103 percent increase over the total in 2014. In Allegheny County in 2015, 422 people died from overdoses — 37 percent more than the previous year.

Statewide, medical examiners and coroners reported more than 3,500 overdose deaths in 2015. Though 2016 data are not finalized, experts have predicted the state will experience another

"People are dying in record numbers," Capretto said. "Opioid pain pills are what caused this problem to literally explode.'

The calls never cease, said Zachary Seery, shift supervisor at Washington Ambulance & Chair.

"Ten years ago in EMS, it was chest pain," said Seery, 30. "You always knew you were going to get a call for chest pain. Now you know you're going to get an overdose. It's second nature."

"It's just another call at this point," said Joshua Lane, 24, an EMT. "It's kind of an annoyance, really, because it happens all the Washington Ambulance & Chair serves 27 municipalities, from Amwell and Canton to South Franklin and West Middletown. The medics and EMTs there said they try to have sympathy for the addicts they treat. But it can be hard, most said.

'On the weekends, you see the same people," EMT Patsy Capo said. "I say, 'I come get you every weekend. Why is that?' We call them frequent Capo blamed inefficient re-hab programs but admitted he doesn't know the solution.

"Rehab programs aren't what they need to be," he said. "They take you in for a month and then turn out." He shook his head.

"You try not to get hard to people," said Rene Riggs, 39. She's studying to become a nurse. Several of the paramedics at Ambulance & Chair are, she said, because it's easy to burn out working in EMS. "I feel bad for them. Nobody says, 'I'm going to be an addict.'

"I know I'm an addict, and I'll take it," the woman said, back home about a month after her overdose. "I'm not a heroin addict. I'm addicted to pain pills."

Despite having a legitimate prescription for painkillers, she said she doesn't keep Since her overdose, she said she gradually has reduced the number of pills she takes. Her daughter keeps the pills at her house.

"If I need one, I take it, but I don't want it to be every day," the woman said. "Addiction is a disease. It's a terrible thing to go through. A lot of people don't make it.' "I'm ashamed I got to that point," she added. "It didn't have to go that far."

In her next breath, h ever, she describes addiction taking over her entire thought process.

painful," he said. "Dope sickness — it's a horrible one."

He said addicts describe withdrawal as the worst flu imaginable, with their head being stabbed by knives. Days of that can be followed by secondary withdrawal: low energy and depressed feelings.

"There's a high, high relapse rate," Capretto said. He pegged the failure rate for those trying to kick it coldturkey at 95 percent.

The woman's words, though, sound like those of conviction. It was more than just the overdose scare, she said, that has pushed her to quit.

Cole, Nova mentor staff in different ways

One is fiery, one is easy-going, but both adopt their role, have lots to offer Bucs' young arms

BY ROB BIERTEMPFEL

BRADENTON, Fla. — As the senior members of the Pirates' starting rotation, Ivan Nova and Gerrit Cole know they have a duty to mentor the younger pitchers. It's a role they embrace, although they go about it in varying ways.

"They just have different mindsets," left-hander Steven Brault said. "Nova is a little more relaxed, while Gerrit is a little more fiery. That's just how it is. It's cool having those two different viewpoints on it."

Cole prefers a hands-on approach. It's not unusual for him to pull a teammate aside in the dugout during a game and offer immediate advice.

"It's a really exciting opportunity," Cole said. "We have a lot of good guys here who I'm looking forward to working with. They're real competitors. They have high aptitude.

Toward the end of last season, Cole and Nova looked on as Brault threw bullpen session and noticed the lefty was overthrowing.

"They both stressed that it's better when I'm not trying to be something that I'm not," Brault said. "For me, being something that I'm not means trying to throw really hard. Having them both give me that 'Be yourself. Work in the strike zone' message really resonated. You hear it from coaches, and that's great. But hearing it from fellow players, especially guys who've been around for a while, is nice."

Cole delivered his message practically as soon as Brault finished throwing his bullpen. Nova did it later, much more casually, in the clubhouse.

"I just want to be a friendly guy, somebody everybody can talk to," Nova said. "I've seen some mean guys who nobody wants to talk to. I don't want to be that person in the clubhouse."

When Nova was traded to the Pirates last August, he was given the locker next to Chad Kuhl's. It was a perfect setup for Kuhl, who wanted guidance as he navigated his rookie season.

"It was nice to sit down and talk with Ivan about the things he's been through," Kuhl said. "He's super cool. Everything he does is super smooth, super relaxed. Maybe some of that comes from him having played in New York. Nothing ever flusters him."

Crosby, Malkin, Letang in lineup together 49 games with Sullivan

BY JONATHAN BOMBULIE

About 6:30 Tuesday night, Evgeni Malkin skated onto the PPG Paints Arena ice, laid down on his back in the right faceoff circle and contorted his legs in all sorts of ways in his regular pregame stretching routine.

With that, the Penguins dodged another bullet.

They survived another stretch playing without one of their three core stars Malkin, Sidney Crosby and Kris Letang — because of Their overall offensive numbers were a little less impressive while Malkin missed seven games with a lowerbody injury, but the Penguins managed to go 4-1-2 and keep pace in the ultracompetitive Metropolitan Division.

"I don't think we've played our best hockey when Geno's been out. The power play hasn't clicked like maybe it did when Geno was in the lineup," winger Chris Kunitz said. "But I think we're just one of those teams that are fortunate enough to have a deep group of centermen that can eat up a lot of minutes when one of the other ones goes down.'

Playing without one of their top three players is nothing new for the Penguins, of course. Since Mike Sullivan took over as coach last December, the Penguins have played 109 regular-season games. Crosby, Malkin and Letang have been in the lineup together for only 49 of them. The sample sizes are small, so the numbers undoubtedly are skewed by a hot stretch here, a cold snap there or the effects of strength of schedule and plain old luck, but a statistical hierarchy has emerged when it comes to which of their top players the Penguins can least afford to be without.

Sophomore Olivia Gray, a Trinity graduate, hit a bases-clearing double to help the Pitt softball team defeat Central Florida and start 5-0.

Pitt softball team enjoying strong start Panthers 5-0, nationally ranked for 1st time in program history

BY JERRY DIPAOLA

Olivia Gray's bases-loaded double was great. Getting thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple? Not so great.

The clutch hit in the top of the eighth inning Sunday launched Pitt's softball team to its fifth consecutive victory, a 6-3 triumph over Central Florida at the season-opening UCF Knights Invitational in Orlando, Fla.

But for coach Holly Aprile, the victory was less important than hit. 325 as a freshman last year, idea is to go and put out what the process that led to it. Making the final out of the inning on third base didn't matter as much as the attempt.

Aprile's team, the most successful on Pitt's campus at the moment, is nationally ranked for the first time in program history: No. 24 by USA Today and No. 25 by ESPN.com. Winning all five games in the tournament three against warm-weather teams UCF and Florida A&M and two against then-No. 20 Kentucky — was nice, but Aprile was more focused on the team's mindset that, she said, made it was hitless in her first two atbats Sunday and, in fact, came home from Florida with a .176 average. But when the outcome was at stake, she delivered.

"You can have two at-bats or three at-bats that are just horrible," Aprile said, "and then you come up there and the bases are loaded and, here it is, you can win the game.

"If you lost it mentally, you're not going to be ready for that moment.

she said, "We don't talk about results.' 'We talk about the things that you've been practicing and what you've been preparing for and just let that do its thing.

"Sometimes, you get the result, and sometimes you don't. We try not to focus on that.'

So far, she will take the results. At 5-0, Pitt, a so-called cold-weather school, is the only other ACC team recognized in the national rankings after Florida State, which is No. 3 in both polls.

Pitt was picked to finish eighth in the 11-team ACC, according to the coaches' preseason poll, but Aprile ignores such things.

Family ties run deep in playoffs

FAMILY • FROM B1

Craig Mankins said. "For now, it's a lot of Stouffer's dinners. We snuck out to a movie last weekend — shh. It's playoff time, so we don't get much down time."

While coaching didn't bring the Mankins together, it's a common love for a couple married to the game. They have three young children who are learning the game: Jeff, a freshman on the varsity team, Abby (13) and Kaitlyn (11).

"It can be hectic, but it's something we enjoy doing," said Lisa, a teacher at Greensburg Salem. "Getting the kids to where they need to be and coaching can be tough. But we make it work.'

"There are times when we fight over the iPad," Craig Mankins said. "Or we'll pitch in and help each other input stats. We're all in."

The Mankins' are not alone. Family connections are all over these playoffs for Westmoreland County teams.

There are the Butlers at Latrobe. Senior all-everything guard Austin, Latrobe's all-time leading boys scorer and the leading scorer in the often is on the floor at the same time with his sophomore brother, Bryce. On more than one occasion, the pair have assisted each other's scores. Their father, Eric, is an assistant coach for the Wildcats.

Latrobe (19-3) won its third straight section title and is hoping for another deep playoff run after reaching the semifinals last season.

"It's a cool thing to play alongside my brother especially in the playoffs," Austin Butler said. "It's cool to have my dad along for the ride, as well. We can all experience history together.

More branches of the Westmoreland hoops family

Jack Liberatore is a senior swing guard at Greensburg Central Catholic and has played a key role in the team's undefeated season (22-0). But his little sister, Sarah, has made an immediate impact as a freshman guard at Hempfield. The siblings support one another from the bleachers on nights when they don't have games.

"I have always looked up to (Jack)," Sarah said. "He's always been big brother. We're WPIAL this season (30 ppg), always talking basketball.

KEN REABE JR. | FOR THE TRIBUNE-REVIEW Greensburg Central Catholic's Jack Liberatore and his sister, Hempfield's Sarah Liberatore, are in the WPIAL postseason.

March Madness is coming up, and that's what will be on

The Liberatores have pedigree: Their parents were college athletes. Their father, Craig, played baseball at Bowling Green, and their mother, Ellen, was a swimmer at John Carroll. Jack signed to play baseball at Ohio U.

The Eisamans at Greensburg Central Catholic have double-championship aspirations. Joe is coach of the girls team, and his daughter, Anna, is a sophomore guard. His son, Dom, is a starting senior forward on the undefeated boys team.

Once we get home from games, we don't talk about particular performances and how each of the did," Joe said. 'On the way home is a different story. There are many nights when we come home from AAU when they're both in the backseat. The front seat gets lonely.'

Dom said he gives advice to his father. "Dom has a high basketball IQ," Joe said.

"The rule in our household is to bring home two WPIAL championship medals," Dom Eisaman said.

• The Penn-Trafford girls have the Nguyen sisters, junior Hannah and Sarah, a freshman.

Cousins compete as crosstown rivals in sophomore Stephanie O'Donnell at Penn-Trafford and senior Maura O'Donnell at Norwin.

• There is a dual playoff presence in the Behr household. Senior Simon Behr is a forward on the Franklin Regional boys team, and his younger sister, Jocelyn, is a junior forward for the girls. Both teams are in the 5A playoffs. Panthers starting guard Nate Leopold has a freshman sister, Brooke, on the girls team.

 Southmoreland boys head coach Frank Muccino has his brother, Tim, as an assistant.

 GCC boys coach Greg Bisignani has a son on the team, sophomore Rvan. The coach's nephew, junior Adam Bisignani, is a forward for

 Also at GCC, senior guard Brittany Stawovy plays with her sister, junior guard Olivia. And sophomore guard Starlyn Ross is the sister of key boys reserve guard Alvin Ross.

There are nights when the Mankins have games and need to separate. But when they reunite, its time to critique on-court ups and downs. Until dinner time. That's when, Craig said, "we shut off" basketball talk.

The Mankins relocated to Greensburg from Punxsutawney in 2009. The high school gym has become their second home in the winter.

"I think we live out of the vending machines downstairs (at the high school),' Jeff Mankins said. "I think there's one day a week I get to sleep before 10 p.m."

Craig also is the head professional at Hannastown Golf Club but switches gears when winter pauses golf season.

"It's golf six months and basketball six months," Jeff Mankins said.

His parents' passion for coaching has inspired Jeff.

"I want to be a coach," he said. "It's fun to see what goes into winning. Nothing is like winning.'

BY PAUL SCHOFIELD

Patrick (26-1, 98-13) is ranked No. 2 in the state at 152 pounds behind Edmund Ruth of Susquehanna Township, who defeated Patrick at the Juniata tournament.

Ruth finished eighth in Class AAA in 2016 at 145.

Patrick didn't have a good state tournament in 2016, losing two matches and not

"I've changed my approach to the season," Patrick said. "I've been working on little things to improve my abilities.

Patrick said this district tournament will prepare himself for the Southwest Regional tournament at IUP's Kovalchick Center on Feb. 24-25.

Other Rams looking to advance include Alex Caldwell (18-7, 65-31), Nathan Porterfield, Brenden Lineberger, Kyrie Miller and Zack Pyle.

Hoover picked up a win for North Allegheny in a 27-26 loss to Erie Cathedral

Also back from injury was Hempfield senior Jarod Verkleeren, who strained his left knee in a match against Penn-Trafford senior Cameron Cov.

Verkleeren has won two matches since his return.

This and that West Allegheny (127) and

Trinity (125) took the top honors at the Buckeye Local Tournament. ... During Derry's PIAA preliminary match at Harbor Creek, one District 10 official had coach Mile Weinell shaking his head when his team was whistled seven times for penalty points. ... Franklin Regional senior Spencer Lee wasn't expected to compete on the WPIAL championship day. Lee has a sore knee but took mat against North Allegheny and received a forfeit. He was hoping to wrestle Zach Stedeford. ... Connellsville honored its 1992 WPIAL championship team Wednesday night in an event sponsored by its alumni group.

points for his career as No. 4 Southmoreland (18-4, 10-2) earned a 86-49 win over Charleroi in Section 4-3A action Feb. 10.

"It is something so special with being out all last year with the knee injury," Pisula said. "It happened on senior night, too. It's all humbling."

What are your college plans for next year? Right now, I think I'm going to Mt. Aloysius to play basketball and major pharmacy. I really like the coaching staff. It's not too big for me. I like the small schools like Southmoreland.

How big was it to finish the season on a threegame winning streak?

We should have won the Monessen game. We hope to keep the momentum going. I don't think we had a bad loss yet. I wish we had those two games against Canon-Mac and Monessen. How tough was the one-point loss to Monessen? I thought we had that one with our point guard on the line with seven seconds left. Brandon had to sit with four fouls. The kid hit a lucky shot.

What did you learn from sitting out last season from tearing your ACL?

This year, I appreciate that everything can be taken away from you at any time. I now play any game like it will get taken away from you. I didn't like sitting on the bench all year, and I'm glad I could get

I didn't think I could score eight 3-pointers in game. I have been working on my 3-point shot since my sophomore year," Felix said.

What are your college plans for next year? I'm going to WCCC and go there undecided. I will play basketball up there and decide what I want to What is your favorite memory of your high school career? Winning the section last year and growing with my team. We have been playing together since the second grade. My senior year wasn't the greatest, but I'm not disappointed.

6 Pitt players among NFL prospects asked to attend annual scouting event in Indy

BY JERRY DIPAOLA

A total of 18 NFL prospects with ties to Western Pennsylvania, including nine who played in the WPIAL, are among 330 college players invited to the NFL Scouting Combine, according to a list released Wednesday by the league.

The combine will be Feb. 28-March 6 in Indianapolis.

Pitt has six players invited: fensive end Garrett Sickels.

quarterback Nathan Peterman, running back James Conner of Erie of St. Francis (Pa.), IUP offensive line-McDowell and former WPIAL stars defensive end Ejuan Price of Woodland Hills, offensive linemen Adam Bisnowaty of Fox Chapel and Dorian Johnson of Belle Vernon and tight end Scott Orndoff of Seton-La Salle.

Five are from West Virginia: cornerback Rasul Douglas, wide receiver Shelton Gibson, outside linebacker Noble Nwachukwu, center Tyler Orlosky and running back Rushel Shell of Hopewell.

Penn State will be represented by wide receiver Chris Godwin and de-

In addition, safety Lorenzo Jerome man Ethan Cooper, Toledo defensive tackle Treyvon Hester of Penn Hills and Michigan State safety Montae Nicholson of Gateway were invited.

The most notable local player invited is Ohio State's Malik Hooker of New Castle, who is expected to be one of the first defensive backs drafted. Hooker reportedly won't participate in the combine after having surgery on his labrum and for a hernia.

sometimes hesitate to approach veterans for advice. However, Nova's easy-going manner makes him approachable.

Nova admitted he was a bit intimidated during his first spring training camp with the San Diego Padres in 2009. He got over it a year later, after he joined the New York Yankees.

"When I was with New York, I got used to that superstar thing really quickly," Nova said. "Out of 25 guys, we had 20 superstars."

In Yankees camp, Nova often saw many of his teammates clustered around Marino Rivera and Derek Jeter.

"There'd be 20 guys around Mariano and Jeter, asking questions," Nova said. "I was like, 'I don't want to be in their shoes right now.' I wanted to have (that leader role), but I thought, 'If it comes, it comes."

Nova tagged along with Andy Pettite and CC Sabathia, picking up pointers.

"When you have a player like that, you take his example," Nova said. "When you play 15 or 20 years, you must be doing something right all the time. I was always trying to learn from them. I learned from how they prepared and how they went out there. I think that's why I (lasted) almost seven years in New York.'

Not long after he joined the Pirates, Nova was walking to the bullpen for a side session and noticed a lot of other pitchers going the same direction.

"I thought they were going to work out, but they went to watch me throw a bullpen," Nova said. "They wanted

Four players came from California, including shortstop McKayla Taylor of Huntington Beach, who had options closer to home.

"I wanted to travel," she said. "I felt comfortable moving across the country."

Aprile didn't have to go that far to find one of her team's top pitchers, freshman Brittany Knight, the ACC Pitcher of the Week. Knight, a native of Windham, Ohio, recorded three victories and a save in Orlando.

"Brittany is just a tremendous competitor," Aprile said. "She will throw it out there, literally and figuratively.'

Penguins weather absence of stars

PENGUINS • FROM B1

Crosby has been the team's most indispensible player.

Under Sullivan, the Penguins are 64-26-11 with Crosby in the lineup and 4-3-1 without him. They're outscored, outshot and outpossessed when their captain doesn't play.

The numbers buttress the argument for Crosby as the sport's most valuable player.

"He's adaptable," Sullivan said. "He can play with whoever we put him with. He has the ability to adapt and make his line effective. He's just an elite player in every aspect of the game."

Next up on the indispensability list is Letang.

In the Sullivan era, the Penguins are 14-10-2 when their top defenseman is out of the lineup. They still outscore, outshoot and outpossess their opponents without him but by significantly smaller margins than when he's in the lineup.

Those stats wouldn't surprise Sullivan. From a coaching perspective, he said it generally is more difficult to deal with injuries to defensemen than injuries to forwards.

"I just think, by nature of the position, it's one of the more difficult positions to play and it's critically important to helping teams play the type of game they're trying to play," Sullivan said. Malkin, meanwhile, has been the member of the big three that the Penguins have had the most success replacing. Under Sullivan, they're 22-7-3 without him. Their goal-based and shot-based metrics don't take much of a hit when Malkin is out.

Those numbers could be taken to mean Malkin isn't as valuable to the team as Crosby and Letang, or they could shine a spotlight on the extraordinary developments that have prevented the Penguins from feeling the effects of his absence over the past two seasons.

When Malkin went down with an elbow injury late last season, the HBK Line was born. Unexpectedly, Carl Hagelin, Nick Bonino and Phil Kessel became hockey's most dangerous trio all the way through the presentation of the Stanley Cup in June.

This season, in Malkin's absence, 27-year-old undrafted rookie Carter Rowney came up from Wilkes-Barre/ Scranton and seamlessly fit in as an NHL-caliber centerman. Josh Archibald scored two goals in his second game in the league. Jake Guentzel, Matt Cullen, Eric Fehr and others changed positions and thrived anyway.

It's a testament to the depth in the organization, but it's also not something the Penguins want to try to pull off frequently.

"You can't replace Geno," Crosby said. "Getting him back makes us that much more dangerous.'

Steelers bring back special teams ace Johnson

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

The Steelers re-signed their second unrestricted free agent, backup linebacker and special teams player Steven Johnson, to a one-year contract.

Johnson, a five-year veteran, earned $760,000 in base salary last season, the NFL minimum. The minimum this season for a player with Johnson's experience is $775,000.

Johnson, who turns 29 in March, appeared in six games with the Steelers before injuring his ankle in Week 10 against the Dallas Cowboys. He was placed on injured reserve and missed the remainder of the season.

Johnson had six special teams tackles on the season. He did not have a snap on defense.

• The Steelers are partnering with auction house Lelands to distribute game-worn jerseys and memorabilia to collectors. The initial auction will continue through March 17.

 The Chicago Bears signed offensive lineman Eric Kush to a two-year contract. The Chartiers Valley and Cal (Pa.) graduate made a career-high four starts and played in eight games for Chicago last season.

Baseball

St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Alex Reyes needs season-ending Tommy John surgery on his right arm. The 22-year-old Reyes made his major league debut Aug. 9 and was 4-1 with a 1.57 ERA in five starts and seven relief appearances. His fastball averaged more than 97 mph.

Hockey

The Washington Capitals acquired

defenseman Tom Gilbert from the Los Angeles Kings for a conditional draft

 Detroit Red Wings forward Gustav Nyquist was suspended for six games without pay by the NHL for high-sticking Minnesota Wild defenseman Jared Spurgeon in the face. The 27-year-old Swede has seven goals and 22 assists in 56 games this season.

Pro basketball

Philadelphia center Joel Embiid will not participate in the Rising Stars Challenge or the Skills Challenge at All-Star weekend in New Orleans because of an injured left knee.

College basketball

Washington star freshman Markelle Fultz will likely be a game-time decision when the Huskies play Thursday night against Arizona State. He sat out the past two games with a sore knee.

Mixed martial arts

Former UFC heavyweight champion Brock Lesnar informed the mixed martial arts promotion that he is retired from competition. The decision doesn't affect the 39-year-old Lesnar's professional wrestling career, where he has spent most of the past five years.

High schools

A New York high school basketball player who helped rescue an ice fisherman from Lake Ontario was kept from suiting up for a game because the heroics caused him to miss the team bus. WWNY-TV reports Lucas Patchen was among the volunteer firefighters in Clayton who rescued a stranded fisherman from a drifting ice slab

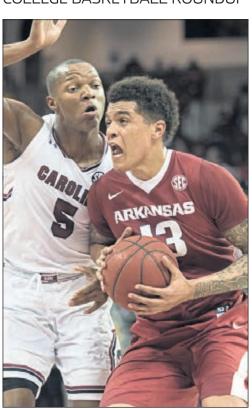

Saturday. He missed the Thousand Islands High School team's departure for a road playoff game later that day. The school requires that any player not riding on a team bus call the coach or athletic director.

Soccer

FIFA Player of the Year Carli Lloyd is joining English women's champion Manchester City. After spending her entire career playing for clubs in her homeland, the United States captain signed to play for City this spring.

■ It didn't take long for Diego Maradona to start making headlines on his short trip to Europe. Two days after his arrival, police were called Wednesday to investigate an altercation involving Maradona and his girlfriend at a hotel in Madrid, the latest controversy involving the former Argentina great.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Arkansas forward Dustin Thomas drives to the basket in the Razorbacks' 83-76 win over No. 21 South Carolina.

Arkansas finally tops ranked team

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Jaylen Barford tied his career high with 23 points, and Arkansas got its first road win over a ranked opponent in almost three years with an 83-76 victory over No. 21 South Carolina on Wednesday night.

Dusty Hannahs added 20 points for the Razorbacks (19-7, 8-5 SEC), including nine straight after the Gamecocks had cut a 10-point deficit to 55-54 with less than 11 minutes re ing to restore the margin.

South Carolina (20-6, 10-3) closed to 77-76 on PJ Dozier's layin with 1:04 to go. But Manuale Watkins hit a running jumper that rattled home with 29.3 seconds left as the shot clock sounded.

No. 18 Cincinnati 68, South Florida 54 -Kevin Johnson scored 14 points, and Gary Clark had 13 points and 14 rebounds as the Bearcats bounced back from their first loss in two months.

Cincinnati (23-2, 12-1 American) shrugged off last Sunday's nine-point loss to SMU and surpassed its victory total for last season. Kyle Washington had 13 points and nine rebounds, and Jacob Evans overcame early foul trouble to finish with 10 points.

Shaler's Geno Thorpe led the Bulls (7-18, 1-13) with 19 points.

No. 23 Maryland 74, Northwestern 64 — Melo Trimble scored a career-high 32 points on 12-for-17 shooting, and the Terps strengthened their position in the Big Ten.

Trimble repeatedly came up with big plays for Maryland (22-4, 10-3), driving inside for layups or connecting from long range. The junior guard made four of Maryland's eight 3-pointers and also contributed four rebounds.

District men Duquesne 96, UMass 66 - Freshman Mike

Lewis II scored a season-high 31 points, and the Dukes snapped an eight-game skid. Lewis was 8 of 14 from the floor, including six 3-pointers for the Dukes (10-16, 3-10 Atlantic 10). Isiaha Mike added 23 points and eight rebounds, Rene Castro had 11 points and six assists and Emile Blackman had 10 points.

After building a 17-point lead in the first half, Duquesne never looked back. Lewis sank back-toback 3-pointers early in the second half to stretch it to 59-39 with 17:46 to play. Mike sank a 3 midway to make it 84-44, and the Dukes cruised to the win. A Blackman layup early in the first half put the Dukes on top for good, and they took a 51-34 advantage into the break.

District women West Virginia 66, No. 24

Kansas State 59 — Chania Ray and Lanay Montgomery had double-doubles, and the Mountaineers held on despite blowing most of a 19-point lead. Ray had 14 points and 10 assists, and Montgomery had 12 points and 12 rebounds for West

Virginia (18-8, 6-8 Big 12). Katina Pardee hit four 3-pointers and also had 14 points. Dayton 66, Duquesne 47 — Julijana Vojinovic led the Dukes with 11 points, but Dayton led for more than 35 minutes in a runaway win. Retail sales rise in January, led by gas, restaurants Americans increased their spending at gasoline stations and restaurants in January, boosting retail sales even though auto buying fell.

Retail sales rose a seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent, down from a solid 1 percent gain in December, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

Overall sales pulled back from a December bump in holiday shopping online and at auto dealers. But Americans spent more than normally expected last month at clothiers, department stores, electronics outlets and sporting goods retailers.

The gains point to continued economic growth. But they also indicate that improving consumer sentiment after President Trump's presidential election, especially optimism among Republicans, has yet to significantly boost retail

Chesapeake Energy to boost drilling budget

Chesapeake Energy Corp. has announced plans to increase its drilling budget and rig count in 2017, saying that confidence is growing in the hard-hit energy

The Oklahoma City-based company said it would increase its capital expenditures to $1.9 billion to $2.5 billion this year. That's compared to 2016 numbers of $1.65 billion to $1.75 billion.

Chesapeake CEO Doug Lawler said in a statement that the move will "position Chesapeake for significant production and earnings growth" in 2018. Chesapeake says it plans to operate an average of 17 rigs in 2017, compared to an average of 10 rigs in 2016.

Anthem trades lawsuits with Cigna

Health insurers Anthem and Cigna are now trading lawsuits instead of working together to salvage a shaky $48-billion buyout agree-

The Blue Cross-Blue Shield carrier Anthem said Wednesday that it is seeking a restraining order to block its smaller rival from terminating their deal, which has already been blocked by a federal judge.

Cigna announced Tuesday that it was suing Anthem and seeking more than $13 billion in damages for what it says were Anthem's breaches of the merger agreement.

Yahoo issues warning in hacking fallout

LONDON — Yahoo is warning users of potentially malicious activity on their accounts between 2015 and 2016, the latest development in the internet company's investigation of a mega-breach that exposed 1 billion users' data several years ago.

Yahoo confirmed Wednesday that it was notifying users that their accounts had potentially been compromised but declined to say how many people were affected.

In a statement, Yahoo tied some of the potential compromises to what it has described as the "state-sponsored actor" responsible for the theft of Plotkin said in a telephone interview that he wasn't concerned because he used his Yahoo email for messages that were "close to spam." In the message he posted to Twitter, he joked that "hopefully the cookie was forged by a state known for such delicacies.

RACE TO THE

Western Pa. couple aim to win Google Lunar XPRIZE on humble budget

BY AARON AUPPERLEE

In the California desert, a pair of Western Pennsylvania natives have their sights set on the moon.

Roderick and Randa Milliron have been at work for more than 20 years on a do-it-yourself rocket system that they hope will head to the moon twice

Interorbital Systems, started in 1996, is part of Synergy Moon, a international collaboration of scientists and companies competing as a team to win the $20 million grand prize in Google's race

The moon has always been our goal," Randa Milliron told the Tribune-Review on the phone from Interorbital headquarters at the Mojave Air and Space Port in Mojave, Calif.

Five teams remain in Lunar XPRIZE competition. To win, a team must land on the moon, travel 500 meters across its surface and send high-definition video and images back to Earth by the end of 2017.

"I know one way or another, we will do this mission," said Kevin Myrick, a founder and team leader of Synergy Moon.

Astrobotic, a Carnegie Mellon University spinoff company headquartered in the Strip District. bowed out of the competition in December when CEO John Thornton said the company would not be ready for a 2017 launch. Thornton doubted any team would land on the moon in 2017.

"He's a dropout," Randa Milliron said of Thornton quitting the competition and criticized him for disparaging the work of the other teams. "He knows nothing about how we're doing.' Milliron, however, acknowledged that landing on the moon and completing the XPRIZE requirements by the end of the year will be tough. Space

The XPRIZE has made no mention of extending the timeline.

Interorbital has about 12 employees. Randa Milliron is from Belle Vernon and serves as the company's CEO. Her husband, Roderick Milliron, is from Mt. Pleasant. He is the chief designer and engineer. Roderick Milliron graduated from the University of Pittsburgh after studying applied mathematics, computer programming and physics. Randa Milliron graduated from Duquesne University with a master's degree in African language.

"Kind of far flung from space endeavors," Randa Milliron joked.

The Millirons were playing in an electro-industrial band in the 1980s and 1990s, splitting time between Berlin and Los Angeles, when a friend told them about a group of rocket scientists working in California's Mojave Desert. The band, H-Bomb White Noise, checked it out. There were a couple of rocket stands, a Quonset hut and "this

$1M UpPrize finalists named

BY NATASHA LINDSTROM

Ten proposals seeking to improve the lives of greater Pittsburgh's most vulnerable people through food access or technology just clinched $10,000 apiece in prize money in the second annual UpPrize social innovation

About $1 million in prizes and operational support is up for grabs through UpPrize, an effort aimed at generating ideas and technology solutions that improve the public good. The Forbes Funds joined officials from BNY Mellon and Bridgeway Capital in announcing the 2016-17 UpPrize finalists during an event Wednesday at the Pittsburgh Innovation Center on the 12th floor of BNY Mellon, Downtown.

'Whether we do it through food access, technology or improving the way nonprofits serve, we want to make a difference immediately in communities," said Kate Dewey, president of The Forbes Funds, a nonprofit consulting arm of The Pittsburgh Foundation. "We were looking for ideas that could be ramped up pretty quickly and also can make a clear difference in the lives of the most vulnerable people.'

Anyone can submit an idea, from students to budding entrepreneurs to small business owners. Winners get cash prizes between $10,000 and $300,000 as well as technical and organizational support.

The 2016-17 contest had two categories: technology solutions to help nonprofits serve vulnerable populations and products or services that increase vulnerable populations' access to healthy food.

Healthy food finalists include:

· Bible Center Church's Oasis Foods, which will use the Oasis Farm and Fishery's solar-powered greenhouse to teach urban farming to Homewood youths.

• Knead Community Cafe, a plan by Kevin and Mary Bode to open a pay-what-you-can cafe in New Kensington where customers can volunteer in exchange for meals. • 412 Food Rescue, which plans to transform fresh unwanted and unused healthy food into "extremely affordable" prepared meals through The Good Food · Black Urban Gardeners and Farmers of Pittsburgh Co-Op, an urban farming collective that aims to improve access to fresh, nutritious foods in Homewood and Uptown.

• Economic Development South, which seeks to open a fresh-foods cornerstore in Clairton.

Impactful technology finalists include:

· BlastPoint, which has developed big-data solutions to help nonprofits target services and measure impact, such as by using data stories and visualizations.

• Expii Inc., which developed a platform to improve personalized, on-demand learning experiences accessed via smartphones.

· Community Data Roundtable, which is creating a parent portal so caregivers have direct access to medical information in a way that's useful and meaningful for parents.

· HiberSense, whose self-learning thermostat system for nonprofits and low-income housing can reduce HVAC bills by 40 percent.

• Rubitection, which developed a medical device to prevent and manage ulcers and bedsores.

The UpPrize judges — 22 local professionals and national experts across public, private and nonprofit sectors — rank ideas based on their feasibility and potential to make measurable impacts.

Each finalist is guaranteed at least $10,000. Final winners — eligible for up to $300,000 — will be announced at a showcase event March 30.

Auto show again makes room for SUVs, large pickups are less likely to buy cars has hit a speed bump. With gas prices holding steady and millennials having children, car manufacturers are betting that SUVs once again will be popular once According to Edmunds.com, new car sales hit a record 17.5 million in 2016, with SUVs, pickups and vans making up

60 percent of the total — also a record. Edmunds reported that in December alone, more than 1 million SUVs, pickups and vans were sold. Some of these vehicles will be on display beginning Friday when the Pittsburgh International Auto Show gets under way at the David L. Lawrence Convention Center in downtown. The show runs through Monday. John Putzier of the Greater Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers Association, which sponsors the event, said the popularity of SUVs isn't all that surprising; it's one Americans typically see every few years as gas prices fluctuate. But it's not always easy for dealers to pivot

"Our dealers will sell anything," he said. "But the dealers are not in the driver's seat when it comes to what manufacturers are building. When that pendulum swings, it's hard for manufacturers to keep up, and it's expensive for dealers to retool their inven-

Wall Street rises further into uncharted territory

WIRE REPORTS

Wall Street pushed further into record-high territory weanesday, with the S&P 500 notching a seven-session winning streak, helped by a round of robust economic data and ongoing optimism that President Trump will cut corporate taxes.

Bigger-than-expected rises in retail sales and consumer prices in January reinforced confidence that the economy is growing at a solid pace following the strongest quarterly Stock Exchange for every five corporate earnings growth in that fell. over two years.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 11.67 points, or 0.5 percent, to 2,349.25. It's the seventh straight gain for the index and its longest winning streak in three and a half years. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 107.45 points, or 0.5 percent, to 20,611.86. The Nasdag composite rose 36.87, or

In a meeting with top executives from retail companies, Trump said he would lower taxes substantially and simplify the tax code, echoing a vow he made last week and on the campaign trail.

The president has provided scant details about his own tax overhaul, but said people will "love" his planned tax 0.6 percent, to 5,819.44. Seven reforms. He assured retail stocks rose on the New York CEOs that tax rates would be hardcore industrial activity that sort of goes with our music," Randa Milliron said.

They were hooked. "All that adventure attached to it. It was high romance. It was irresistible," Milliron said. The Millirons started spending more time in the desert with members of the Pacific Rocket Society. In 1995, they built and fired their first rocket engine. They founded Interorbital Systems a year later and had their first launch in 1999

Space travel at that time was still dominated by the government. The commercial space industry had yet to take off.

"We felt kind of like pirates or renegades making these powerful machines and realizing we could do it ourselves," Randa Milliron said. "I guess it was really the beginning of the DIY or the commercial space movement.

Fifteen years later, having to take jobs as movie extras at times and selling do-it-yourself satellite building kits that they will launch for $8,000 to raise money for their company, the Millirons launched their first NEPTUNE rocket component.

The Millirons aren't billionaires like Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos, founder of Blue Origin, or Elon Musk, the founder of SpaceX. They build their rockets from the ground up in-house, us-components whenever possible to keep the cost down. When they can't afford a part, they learn how to make it.

They build modular rockets out of Common Propulsion Modules, or CPM, which are basically giant propellant containers, Randa Milliron said. Strap together three CPM and you have a NEPTUNE 3, a rocket capable of taking a 12-kilogram payload into low-Earth orbit for between $500,000 and $750,000, Randa Milliron said. Eight CMPs, a NEPTUNE 8, can carry a payload to the moon for less than $5 million, the Millirons hope. Team Synergy will use a NEPTUNE 8 for its XPRIZE flight.

And to save even more money, Interorbital isn't going to launch from a traditional space port such as Vandenberg Air Force Base, about a three-hour trip along the coast from Los Angeles where a launch can cost $3 million, but from the middle of "We are disrupters," Randa Milliron said. "We are showing this can be done at radically, radically lower costs.

Myrick said there's a lot to like about Interorbital's approach to rockets. The modular design makes scaling pervious successes possible. The company's scrappy, do-it-yourself attitude allows it to offer launches at a fraction of the cost of other ing off-the-shelf, non-aerospace space companies, and it doesn't rely on venture capital for funding. Myrick said success in the XPRIZE will depend on securing enough money for the launch. He wouldn't say how much is needed. Interorbital has four highprofile launches. The company will test its guidance system this spring with a suborbital launch that will carry 11 small satellites payloads. The Millirons hope their first orbital flight will be in late summer.

In the third quarter of this year, Interorbital will launch its Lunar Bullet mission, a rocket shot directly at the moon and aimed to slam into the lunar surface. The company's XPRIZE launch will happen by the end of the year, Milliron hopes. A NEPTUNE 8 rocket will fly to the moon, launch a lander that will deploy a rover to roll across the surface, snap a few photos and maybe some video, and win the $20 million Google Lunar XPRIZE in the process.

But even that, Milliron said, is a test.

"Everything we're doing is a test launch for the next phase," she said.

The company has two more moon missions planned for 2018, one that will return samples from the moon to Earth.

A House panel advanced legislation Wednesday that would allow vintage, unopened bottles of spirits to be put back into circulation in bars and restaurants.

The measure would allow people who possess the bottles to sell them to bars, restaurants or liquor stores. If the bill becomes law, Kentucky bars and restaurants could seek out rare bottles to add to their shelves and pour as shots or mixed in cocktails. The trend has become popular in some big city bars and restaurants in other states.

The bill drew no opposition in the House Licensing, Occupations and Administrative Regulations Committee.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Trump met face-to-face Wednesday for the first time since Trump's inauguration, and they focused on common goals such as combating Iran's nuclear ambitions in their remarks. But with Flynn out of the picture, Iran is expected to become less of a focus, allowing Kushner to direct the conversation more toward peace.

"In the absence of Flynn, it will accentuate in the short term him being a point person early on," said David Makovsky, a former Obama administration senior adviser on peace talks.

"I've known President Trump for many years," Netanyahu said, before turning to Kushner, seated in the audience. "Can I reveal, Jared, how long I've known you? Well, he was never small; he

He did not repeat his campaign pledge to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. "We're looking at it very, very strongly," Trump said. "We're looking at it with great care, great care, believe me. And we'll see what happens.'

Trump told Netanyahu on Wednesday that peace with the Palestinians is important to him and that he would push for a peace deal. But he emphasized the right deal is one that works for both sides and they had to negotiate. He asked the prime minister to "hold back on settlements for a little bit.'

To accomplish peace, Trump said, the Israelis will have to "show some flexibility," and the Palestinians will have to acknowledge and reduce some of the "hate" for Israel.

"They're taught tremendous hate," Trump said. "I've seen what they're taught. And you can talk about flexibility there, too, but it starts at a very young age, and it starts in the schoolroom.'

White House continues to favor conservative media

At President Trump's joint press conference with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, he only took two questions from members of the American

The first question went to The Christian Broadcasting Network, which states its mission "is to prepare the United States of America and the nations of the world for the coming of Jesus Christ;" the second to Townhall.com, a website whose mission is to "amplify" conservative voices - particularly conservative talk radio.

Neither outlet asked about reports of contact between the Trump camp and Russian intelligence agents or the recent resignation of national security adviser Michael Flynn.

Jim Acosta of CNN, which Trump has repeatedly labeled as "fake news," was not called on but asked a question about Russia, which Trump ignored.

Trump's selection of conservative media over mainstream news outlets is in line with the favoritism he has shown at previous press conferences, but a departure from past presidents. Typically, the wire service the Associated Press was called on first, followed by major news organizations.

Third hospital cited in mold case

Deceased patient's daughter at odds with UPMC Shadyside

BY BEN SCHMITT

Chelsea Haines can't get over UPMC's description of her father as an "avid gardener."

John R. Haines had a small plot on his Upper St. Clair property where he grew tomatoes and a few vegetables.

"It was a hobby of his, not a big endeavor," she said. "The garden itself is very small."

The description by UPMC appeared in an emailed statement to the media after Haines' family filed a medical malpractice lawsuit against the health giant this week.

Haines, a leukemia patient, died in UPMC Shadyside on Oct. 7. The civil lawsuit filed in Allegheny County contends a hospital-acquired rhizopus mold infection diagnosed two days earlier contributed to Haines, 65, a retired AT&T communications technician, is the sixth person believed to have died after contracting a fungal infection inside a UPMC facility since 2014.

"His illness progressed ... and, despite our best efforts. we did find a colony of rhizopus in his lung fluid immediately prior to his passing. His family told us that Mr. Haines was an avid gardener," UPMC said in a statement Tuesday. "We explained that while it was possible he contracted his fungal infection prior to his hospitalization, we decided, however, to classify it as hospital-acquired per CDC guidelines even though clinically there can be no certainty.

Chelsea Haines, 31, of New York recalled the day at UPMC Shadyside when the family decided to authorize doctors to disconnect her father from a respirator that was keeping him alive.

A doctor handed her mother. Joanne, a letter addressed to John Haines hours before he died. It read, "During your stay, you developed an infection in addition to the infection you presented with to UPMC Shadyside."

Besides UPMC, lawyers for Haines' family are suing the hospital's DuBois linen supplier. The lawsuit marks the first time that a hospital other than UPMC Presbyterian and UPMC Montefiore has been connected to the mold crisis outbreak at UPMC.

At the time of his initial admission, Haines did not have any kind of fungal infection, according to Pittsburgh attorneys Brendan Lupetin and Jerry Meyers.

"Fungus is everywhere, that's true," Meyers said. "But I'll tell you one place it shouldn't be. It shouldn't be in operating rooms. It shouldn't be in ICUs.

Five families have taken legal action in connection with the mold incidents. Two cases have settled for $1.35 million apiece.

OROVILLE, Calif. — Officials raced to drain more water from a lake behind battered Oroville Dam as new storms began rolling into Northern California on Wednesday and tested the quick repairs made to damaged spillways that raised flood fears.

The three storms were expected to stretch into next week. Forecasters said the first two storms could drop a total of 5 inches of rain in higher elevation.

However, the third storm, starting as early as Monday, could be more powerful.

There a potential for several inches," National Weather Service forecaster Tom Dang said. "It will be very wet."

Nonetheless, California Department of Water Resources chief Bill Croyle said water was draining at about four times the rate that it was flowing in and the repairs should hold at the nation's tallest dam.

About 100,000 cubic feet of water was flowing from the reservoir each second, enough to fill an Olympicsize swimming pool.

Croyle said work crews had made "great progress" cementing thousands of tons of rocks into holes in the spillways.

Ex-PSU officials seek appeal as criminal trial nears

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG—Three former Penn State administrators facing child endangerment charges for their handling of the Jerry Sandusky molestation scandal have asked a judge for permission to pursue an appeal, barely a month before their scheduled trial.

Penn State ex-President Graham Spanier, former Vice President Gary Schultz and former Athletic Director Tim Curley filed nearly identical requests this week that asked the trial judge to let them appeal his recent decision keeping in place felony charges of endangering the welfare of children. The filings were unsealed Wednesday.

The defendants made several arguments, including that too much time has elapsed under the statute of limitations: they did not provide direct care for children; they are accused of actions that occurred before the law was changed; and prosecutors should not be allowed to add a conspiracy charge.

Spanier's lawyers wrote that an immediate appeal to Superior Court could result in dismissal of all charges, which would make a trial unnecessary. The trial is scheduled to begin with jury selection on March 20. "A ruling on these controlling questions of law would not require the resolution of any disputed factual issues," they told Judge John Boccabella. "Thus, these issues are particularly appropriate for resolution by the Superior Court prior to trial." On Feb. 1, Boccabella threw out charges of failing to properly report suspected abuse, but the judge denied requests to have other charges dismissed. His order also did not directly address a request by state prosecutors to add a conspiracy charge related to the child welfare accusation.

Superior Court last year threw out charges of perjury, obstruction and conspiracy against the defendants.

Schultz's lawyer said in his filing that it was not clear whether prosecutors consider the child-endangerment conspiracy charge to be part of the case or whether they can add it.

"In either case, at a minimum, there is substantial ground for difference of opinion as to whether Mr. Schultz can be subjected to trial on a conspiracy charge following the appellate court's dismissal of that charge,' wrote attorney Tom Far-

The attorney general's office said it was reviewing the defense filings, and defense lawyers for the three men declined to comment further.

VENEZUELA

CARACAS — The government pulled CNN in Spanish from the nation's airwaves Wednesday, shutting off the news channel after officials angrily criticized a report alleging the country's diplomats sold passports to members of a Middle East terror group.

The National Telecommunications Commission announced it initiated sanctions because of news stories that it considered "direct aggressions" that "threaten the peace and democratic stability" of Venezuela, the agency said in a news release.

The move comes as the new U.S. administration seems to be trying to further isolate Venezuela's embattled socialist President Nicolas Maduro.

11 homes burned while hundreds evacuate wildfire

WELLINGTON — Firefighters were battling flames in the hill suburbs of the nation's secondlargest city Thursday after a wildfire burned down 11 homes and forced hundreds of people to evacuate.

An increase in humidity was helping efforts although strong winds were also fanning the flames of the wildfire, which was spread over 4,400 acres in Christchurch's Port Hills. A helicopter pilot who was a decorated soldier died in a crash while fighting the blaze Tuesday.

The mayors of Christchurch City and the adjacent Selwyn District declared a state of emergency Wednesday. Selwyn Mayor Sam Broughton said changing wind had made the fires unpre-

FRANCE

Candidate Fillon suggests trying teens as adults

COMPIEGNE — Conservative presidential candidate Francois Fillon wants to prosecute 16 and 17 year olds as adults, arguing it would prevent the kind of unrest that has rocked the lowincome suburbs of Paris following an alleged police rape.

With his campaign struggling under corruption allegations, Fillon sought to burnish his tough-on-security image Wednesday with proposals likely to please far-right voters. He complained that many minors were involved in the recent unrest, but said they are "virtually untouchable because the law protects them more than their victims.

He made the comments during a meeting with police and security officials in the town of Compiegne in northern France.

GERMANY

Paper apologizes for false story on migrant attacks

BERLIN - Daily paper Bild apologized to its readers for falsely reporting about a group of migrants allegedly assaulting women on New Year's Eve in the city of Frankfurt

The paper wrote in a statement it regrets a report published earlier this month which quoted a waitress, a restaurant owner and his staff saying they witnessed "massive attacks by a mob of drunken foreigners" in downtown Frankfurt.

Bild said neither police reports of that night nor an investigation following the paper's report could confirm any of the allegations.

IRAN

Officials allow females at beach volleyball games TEHRAN — Iranian media said authorities have allowed female spectators at a beach volleyball tournament after organizers threatened to halt the event in protest.

The semi-official ISNA news agency reported that women were allowed into the stadium Wednesday at the start of the four-day international tournament on Kish island.

It says authorities backtracked after the international volleyball federation, known as FIVB, threatened to suspend the event in protest. Female fans are traditionally barred from attending male sporting events in the Islamic Republic.

Woodview Drive $339,000

- Advertorial -

Location is everything, and the beautiful two-story house at 1506 Woodview Drive in Unity is in a perfect spot for a family home.

With nearby schools and a trip of less than 3 miles to the mall or grocery store, this home built in 1980 and updated recently has convenience on the outside and all the amenities inside.

The four-bedroom home listed at $339,000 features new hardwood flooring and carpets, and more than half of the windows have been replaced.

In the kitchen, the most recent owners remodeled and installed new appliances — the refrigerator, dishwasher, disposal unit and microwave come equipped.

Further improvements were made in the past few months.

The master bathroom — one of two full and two half bathrooms in the house — was gutted to install an oversized, tiled shower and a double-bowl sink with granite counters.

The spacious rooms, including an 18x19-foot family room, 13x19 dining room and 11x12 living room, allow plenty of flexibility for furniture placement and room to host gatherings.

The lower level comes ready with a 20x16 game room that has one of two wood-burning fireplaces in the house, making it a comfortable place for game day or for the kids to play.

The 16x16 master bedroom has a walk-in closet and shares the upper level with the other three bedrooms and two linen closets, giving the house plenty of room for storage.

The home also has an attached two-car garage, and its rear yard is enclosed by mature landscaping that has been well-maintained through the years.

The house is located in the Greater Latrobe School District, and taxes on the property are $7,377.

'As One' an intimate look into quest to find one's true self

BY GREG KERESTAN

What began as a simple burst of inspiration has become a life-changing experience for composer Laura Kaminsky. From a simple "vague but clear notion... to write an opera about a transgender person," she and librettists Kimberly Reed and Mark Campbell created the chamber opera "As One," which has beaten the odds to become the most-produced new opera in America.

Composed for two singers and a string quartet, the opera tells the story of Hannah, who travels the world on a quest to find herself, not only as a member of the trans community but as a member of the human race. "As One," which will be presented by the Pittsburgh Opera Feb. 18 to 26 at its Strip District headquarters, points toward the modern in both the subject matter and its vision of the future of opera.

"There's a lot of activity in the opera world" around smaller, more intimate pieces, the composer says.

Kaminsky has composed for casts of singers and musical ensembles from tiny to orchestral, but when it came to writing "As One," she thought small.

The cast of "As One" is only two singers: baritone Brian Vu as "Hannah before," and mezzo-soprano Taylor Raven as "Hannah after."

This intimacy is by design, says Kaminsky. "It's like a monodrama for two singers. I wanted an intimate ensemble to support that, so I decided to use the unified voice of a string quartet."

Like the two singers embodying one person, the string quartet is four instruments with their own distinct

"The viola is the middle voice of the string quartet," Kaminsky says, "and I assigned the viola the soul of Hannah, metaphorically speaking. There's a lot of important music belonging to the viola that represents Hannah's deepest self, and so that instrument is very central."

Four musicians, two singers and one conductor bring the total performer count to seven, a far cry from the symphonic traditions of the grand opera. Though Kaminsky has written for the large traditional opera world before, she prefers chamber opera.

"The chamber music idiom is so intimate; everyone is so completely in communication, trusting each other," she says. "When I wanted to tell this story, wanting it to be personal and intimate, I knew I had to parallel the oneness of the singers with the oneness of the quartet."

Given the focus on singularity and duality within its compositional DNA, it is little surprise that "As One" began from a singular idea crafted by multiple artists.

"The story is actually an original piece," says Kaminsky, but inspired by the experience of seeing the film "Prodigal Son" by Kimberly Reed. "I loved the way she revealed her story on film. I wrote to the film company and met with Kimberly ... and with Mark Campbell, a renowned librettist. The three of us immediately clicked."

Not only did filmmaker Reed contribute to the libretto alongside Campbell, she created an original filmed piece used as a primary element of the set onstage.

Though many new operas are performed as singular events and never revived, "As One" will have had at least 10 major productions by the end of this year, making it the most commonly produced new opera in the United States. Kaminsky attributes its popularity, in part, to the timeliness of the story.

"When I first started this, the trans, I hate to say 'issue,' but the cultural conversation around this hadn't entered the zeitgeist the way it had by the time it premiered in 2014," she says.

More than a literal story of transgender identity and the fluidity of gender, "As One" is a metaphorical exploration.

"Hannah herself is something of a metaphor for self-discovery. We are all multiple things. We are all a spectrum of who and what we are, whatever that may be," Kaminsky says. "The struggle to find ourselves, the fear of not finding it, and the need to find where you fit in. These are universal truths every person discovers, which is why I think people have responded so much to this character. She speaks to people."

Dustin Bates boasts atypical background for a musician

BY REGE BEHE

Welcome to the future of rock music — or one vision of the future. Starset, appearing Feb. 17 at the Rex Theater, South Side, combines the interests of founder Dustin Bates engineering, astronomy alternative history - with music that is similarly diverse.

Bates has an atypical background for a musician. He earned a Ph.D. in electrical engineering from Ohio University, has done research for the U.S. Air Force, and taught at the International Space University in France.

The band's new album, "Vessels," debuted at No. 11 on the Billboard 200 chart. Bates also created The Starset Society, an entity explores the effect of technology on society and provides the lyrical content for the songs. Marvel Comics will release a graphic novel later this year based on The Starset Society.

Bates recently answered a few questions for the Tribune-Review.

Question: Not too many musicians have Ph.D.'s in electrical engineering. Beyond any technical considerations, are there any parallels between music and electrical engineering?

Answer: I tend to write music like an engineer working on a project. I follow a process from concept to chord structure to melody to lyrics. Nevertheless, it is important to balance the left brained engineering with the right brain creativity. The engineering also helps me create and build the stage production.

Q: You've integrated multiple platforms music, graphic novels, videos, and social media — to engage fans. Has this approach benefitted Starset?

A: This approach has benefitted The Starset Society, which utilizes our band and these various other media for promoting its message of near-future technology and its effects upon society. In many ways, Starset is a marketing campaign of this group - bringing awareness of science and the mission of TSS to the general public.

Q: The lyrics (and vid-

A: I'm a big fan of science fiction and enjoy both of those writers — specifically "Neuromancer" by Gibson and "Snow Crash" by Stephenson. Other definitely notable authors would be Isaac Asimov, Ray Bradbury and Frank cians who inspired you when you started writing the music?

A: Absolutely. I've been inspired by great rock from bands like Deftones, Linkin Park, 30 Seconds to Mars, and Breaking Benjamin, for instance. At the same time, the music draws from Hans Zimmer, Sigur Ros, and various forms of elec-

A: It has been a long, slow climb up with various milestones having been reached along the way. Getting to No. 11 on the Billboard chart recently was particularly cool.

Q: Are there fans who buy into the concept and not the music, and vice versa? Can Starset be enjoyed on multiple levels?

A: We expect and appreciate that 90 percent of fans will just enjoy the music on a surface level, and we do our best to not alienate them. The music can totally be enjoyed without digging deeper. In fact, I try to write the songs with this in mind. On the other hand, there is much for fans to consume if they are looking for a richer experience.

Marino struts into 'Pippen' as the 'Leading Player'

BY CANDY WILLIAMS

Renata Marino of Greensburg is used to wearing more than one hat in her roles as coordinator for Stage Right's School for the Performing Arts and choreographer for Stage Right's professional theater company.

She's also a veteran performer who will be donning another hat — a stylish black glitter bowler to be exact — for her portrayal of the Leading Player in Stage Right's production of the classic musical, "Pippin."

Theater students have debated whether the part should be played by a male, largely because dancing legend Ben Vereen defined the role and won a Tony Award in a 1973 Broadway revival of the show. But then along came actress Patina Miller in a 2013 revival, who also won a Tony as best actress in a musical as the Leading Player.

Marino supports gender equality when it comes to the casting of the character,

'Pippin'

When: 7:30 p.m. Feb. 17-18, 2 p.m. Feb. 19 Admission: $25, $20 for students Where: Greensburg Garden & Civic Center, Old Salem Road Details: 724-836-8000

or thepalacetheatre.org

who leads a mysterious performance troupe in telling the story of a young prince (Pippin, played by Greensburg native Alex Noble) and his search for meaning.

"There's no significant difference between a male or female Leading Player," she says. "They both want the same thing, to encourage Pippin to find his purpose in life."

The biggest difference in her portraval will be the addition of her own dance moves, which she created for Stage Right while being mindful of staying true to the "feel" of Broadway choreographer Bob Fosse's work.

"There is a mixture of my original choreography and a few numbers that are a restaging of Bob Fosse's original choreography," Marino says. "To me, the show 'Pippin' is Bob Fosse, so to stray too far away from that would have felt disrespectful."

Besides Noble, who recently finished performances in Pittsburgh Musical Theater's "Hunchback of Notre Dame," the cast of "Pippin" features Tony Marino, Greg Kerestan and Kim McLeod of Greensburg, Courtney Harkins of Harrison City, Will Beddick of Latrobe and, in her Stage Right debut, Lauren-Rose King, who recently relocated to Pittsburgh from New York.

The show is musically directed by Chris McAlister of Johnstown with scenic design by Mark Kissner of Greensburg.

Renata Marino says "Pippin" is both a humorous allegory about growing up and a dark tale about the danger of empty promises and false appearances.

The players on the stage to me represent Pippin's ego as he tries to find that complete fulfillment," she says. "It isn't until he learns to give himself to someone else that he begins to find a sense of inner peace and self-worth. He must come to accept that life is never perfect and what we have to do is find someone or something to care about and do the best we can to devote ourselves to that.'

Artistic director Tony Marino says the production includes some of the most memorable songs in musical theater, including "Magic to Do," "Simple Joys," "Glory" and "Morning Glow."

"They are fantastic pieces on their own, but in the context of the show, they become powerful and moving moments of theatrical perfection," he says.

Spend an evening with 'Sal the Voice'

BY CANDY WILLIAMS

Sal Valentinetti is only 21 years old, but if you close your eyes, you'd swear you're listening to Frank Sinatra crooning his unforgettable renditions of "My Way" or "That's Life."

Ever since the young singer wowed the judges on NBC's "America's Got Talent" competition including Heidi Klum, who selected him as her "Golden Buzzer" artist last summer — there's been no turning back for the proud New Yorker from Bethpage, Long Island.

He had to settle for fifth place on the TV reality show, but his achievement was a huge deal to the entertainer and former pizza delivery guy who grew up listening to Sinatra, Bobby Darin, Dean Martin, Vic Damone and other artists of that era whose songs he loves singing.

He opened for Jay Leno in Las Vegas in November and recently appeared with guest host Regis Philbin on Hallmark Channel's "Home & Family" show. He was asked by Klum to perform a duet with her on a TV Christmas special; they sang "Santa Baby" together on "America's Got Talent Holiday Spectacular" in December.

He's currently on tour with concert dates booked through June and other engagements scheduled into 2018. He will perform on Feb. 18 at the Palace Theatre in Greensburg, with opening act comedian Mike Marino.

"I'm 21 and I'm getting to live my dream," says Valentinetti, who is known in music circles and to his friends as "Sal the Voice."

He's fine with being labeled an old-school entertainer, but he also is committed to "bridging the gap between the generations" with the music he loved listening to with his late grandmother and introducing anyone who will listen to his unique sound, regardless of their age.

"I was inspired by the music I grew up with," he says. "My voice just happened to be deep and raspy. I don't need 30 years of scotch and cigarettes to sound like Sinatra."

Along with the classics he performs, he says he wants to do more with reimagining pop standards such as his hit interpretation of One Direction's "Story of My Life." He's also planning to record an upcoming live performance in Westbury, N.Y., which will be released as a CD.

It's important for Valentinetti to share his positive attitude with everyone around him, including his production team. Before a performance, he gathers his band members, his dancers and his technical crew together and asks them, "Is everybody here because they love what they do? Remember, when you're here, it's the happiest place on earth, like Disney.'

"You gotta spread that message of positivity," he

The performer has several plans for other directions he'd like to see his career take, including a television variety show, an animated movie, and of course, more recordings.

For now, he's happy taking his show on the road.

Opening his show at the Palace Theatre will be comedian Mike Marino, who hails from Jersey City, N.J., and is known in his act as "New Jersey's Bad Boy."

He has done many national television commercials, earning a best actor Clio Award nomination, and has performed on television shows, including "As the World Turns," "One Life to Live," "Becker," "Nikki," "Frasier" and "Party of Five." His film credits include "Crooks," "Pizza with Bullets," and Steven King's "Lucky Quarter."

Marino was inducted into the New Jersey Comedy Hall of Fame, and in 2015 he won the USO Bob Hope Comedy Award for his performances for the military.

Stand up and cheer for 'Broadway Standing Ovation'

BY KELLIE B. GORMLY

Renowned symphony pops conductor Jack Everly — who divides his time among several orchestras - has created a Broadway-themed show just for the Steel City and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Everly conducts the show "PNC Pops: Broadway Standing Ovation," where a cast of singers will perform some of the best-known songs from beloved Broadway shows including "Phantom of the Opera" and "Oklahoma!" The pops show, playing three times Feb. 17 to 19, offers the audience a live version of what a greatesthits showtunes album might be, says Everly of Indianapolis.

"Every orchestra in the world wants to have a Broadway program. because people just love it so much," says Everly, who leads the National Symphony Orchestra during patriotic holiday shows in Washington, D.C. Magician Chris "Doc" Dixon performs his shell game trick.

ERIC FORBERGER

'Doc' Dixon blends magic, showmanship and comedy

BY SHIRLEY McMARLIN

Magician Chris "Doc" Dixon's first national television appearance ended with him being escorted off the stage by two bouncers.

Luckily, that won't discourage him from appearing at the University of Pittsburgh at Greensburg on Feb. 17 in an all-ages comedy/magic show to benefit the JDRF Western Pennsylvania Chapter.

The Hempfield resident's ignominious exit was part of the "Stage 56 Bar Tricks" segment of the Late Late Show with James Corden on CBS, in which four people each perform a party trick. Judged by audience applause, winners earn the right to drink at an on-stage

The audience cheered a guy shooting a basketball into a net on his head, another guy flipping seven spoons simultaneously into separate cups and a Texas gal rolling up a frying pan into a burrito shape.

They booed after Dixon, with a little sleight of hand, linked what Corden described as three knotshaped "regulation bar pretzels covered in a slight bit of urine."

On his website, the magician says he knew he would be voted off as soon as he met the other contestants: "Juggling and strength exhibitions climax with 'Look what they did!' Magic, at least in this very brief context, ends with a "How in the @#$ did he do that?"

But playing along is part of being a professional entertainer.

Dixon, who bills himself as a "MagiComedian," says he has plenty of other tricks up his sleeve for the JDRF show: "I'm bringing my chainsaw, psychic rabbit and a deck of cards.'

Dixon says he likes to tease audiences with the prospect of his mind-reading rabbit, Butch.

'People see that and think, 'What's that?' " he says. "If you say you're going to saw a lady in half, everybody knows what that Intrigued as a child by card tricks in the movie, "The Sting," Dixon later embarked on a career now spanning 30 years of performing at clubs, resorts, corporate events, trade shows and even the White House Easter egg roll. He's a regular at special Kennywood events.

Dixon first linked up with JDRF at the October 2016 One Walk fundraiser at Pitt-Greensburg, where he entertained participants prior to the event.

A comedy show will be a first for the organization, says development coordinator Ashley Novacic.

"After (the walk) in October, he called me with this concept and, needless to say, our staff loved it." Novacic says. "It's so out of the box and nothing like anything we'd done before.

"When considering where to hold this fundraiser, it was a simple choice to reach out to the school," she adds. "It works out really well, because it's a central location for our families in Westmoreland County. Many of our families in the area are big fans of his.'

Dixon also has a personal reason for getting involved.

He and his wife are both foster and adoptive parents, and he says, "Our lives are pretty much kid-centered.

"One of my magician friends in New Jersey has a son who has type 1 diabetes," he says. "Being dads is a big part of how we see ourselves. I wanted to do something more than just say, 'Hey, I'm here for you.' "

Novacic says that local Girl Scout troops also have signed on for the show.

The girls are assisting with overall promotion of the event, making baked goods for the guests and collecting canned goods for the Westmoreland County Food Bank," she says. "One of the Girl Scouts actually has type 1 diabetes, so it's a really sweet and sincere gesture to see the support of her peers."

Show proceeds will benefit "research that is leading to better treatments, prevention and one day, a world without type 1 diabetes,' Novacic says.

FINE OLD THEATERS

THEATRE HISTORICAL SOCIETY RELOCATES TO PITTSBURGH

BY MIKE MACHOSKY

The Theatre Historical Society of America is dedicated to preserving the memory of America's theaters, big and small. They had such a great time in Pittsburgh at their conference in 2014, and felt so welcomed here, that they've moved their entire operation to Pittsburgh, from suburban Chicago.

It's now located on two floors of the Senator John Heinz Regional History Center's annex in the Strip District. Long-term plans include a free-standing museum of their own, somewhere in Pittsburgh.

The collection of photos, records and materials for almost 18,000 theaters was kept above the restored York Theatre in Elmhurst, Ill., since 1991.

"We didn't have any room," says executive director Richard L. Fosbrink. "We couldn't fit anything more, physically, in the building. It was weighing on the floor joists. The building didn't have temperature and humidity controls.'

Ironically, the York Theatre helped price them out of the neighborhood.

"(Elmhurst) cited the theater as one of the reasons the downtown was blooming," Fosbrink says. "It was impossible for our staff to live there — just too expensive. It was equivalent to a Mt. Lebanon."

The Theatre Historical Society of America was started by Ben M. Hall, an author and editor for Time-Life Inc., who wrote a history of American movie theaters, "The Best Remaining Seats." Hall was murdered in New York, and his collection of pictures, memorabilia and other materials was stored in the houses of members, and a church basement in Chicago, for decades.

'We did a conference in Pittsburgh in 2014," says Fosbrink, 42, of Forest Hills. "Visit Pittsburgh, the Heinz History Center, Pitt, the Cultural Trust — everybody rolled out the red carpet. I had a conversation with (Pittsburgh Cultural Trust president and CEO) Kevin McMahon. He said, 'Oh, you should move to Pittsburgh.'

"Ultimately, it came down to partnerships, the cost of living, and the cost of doing business. Pittsburgh just happens to have the greatest story — it's the birthplace of the commercial movie theater.

The first Nickelodeon movie theater was opened on Smithfield Street, Downtown, in 1905.

There's a little bit of overlap with the Heinz History Center's exhibits, but not

"We do discuss the Nickelodeon, and there are some artifacts from the first one that opened on Smithfield Street in 1905,' says History Center spokesman Brady Smith. "It's in the 'Pittsburgh: A Tradition of Innovation' exhibit, where we talk about firsts in Pittsburgh. The Nickelodeon is a important piece of Pittsburgh his-Theatre tory—essentially the first movie theater." Historical "I think it's great

"The Hispointment only tory Center's role is re-Where: Senaally just leasing them tor John Heinz Smithsonian quality History Center, storage space in our Museum Conservation Center building. ... It's a good fit as far as we're concerned. It's humidity-controlled, pest-controlled, got security. We're happy to protect their collection and partner on this."

"It's certainly fitting that they're here," Smith says. "The city of Pittsburgh has a great history when your'e talking about

One major obstacle to the move was convincing Theatre Historical Society members that they weren't moving just so Fosbrink could come home. Fosbrink grew up in Connellsville, went to Seton Hill University and taught at Central Catholic in Pittsburgh.

Film history is thick on the ground in Western Pennsylvania, even in Connellsville.

"That's the birthplace of Edwin S. Porter, who invented cinematography, did the 'Great Train Robbery' (1903)," Fosbrink

The Theatre Historical Society didn't just pick Pittsburgh on a whim.

"We looked at 38 cities," he says. "We sent out (requests for proposals) to the 38 largest cities in the U.S., and described what we were looking for. We got three responses. One neighborhood in Chicago. New York City's deputy of cultural affairs said, 'You should move to New York, but we can't help you, and you need lots of money.' Same with D.C.'

So Pittsburgh it was. The collection now has room to grow, and a supportive host at the Heinz History Center that knows quite a bit about preservation.

"We know that we've got 18,000 theaters documented in the archives," says Fosbrink. "Thirty to 40 years ago, we started creating a file for every theater that ever existed in America. If somebody clipped an article about Loew's Penn (now Heinz Hall) in 1969 and sent that in, then we would create a file and put that in it.

"There were probably 100,000 theaters in the U.S., over 200-some years," Fosbrink says. "We'd like to document every theater that ever existed."

Their collection includes about 50 separate collections, from a vast array of sources. There's the Loews collection from Loews movie theaters, which was about to dump their records in the trash when a Theatre Historical Society member intervened.

"All the construction documentation and photographs, including the Loews Penn in Pittsburgh," Fosbrink says. "It also included stuff from their marketing offices, like Loews 'Movie Memo' (to theater owners) — here's how you promote 'Cleopatra' next week."

Some collections are of a more personal nature, but are no less valuable.

"Fred Beal lived in Youngstown or Cleveland," Fosbrink says. "He hopped on a train to Pittsburgh for a day and took photographs of all these theaters in 1948. That's a collection you wouldn't see — it wasn't published anywhere. There's cool shots of the Stanley Theater (now Benedum Center)."

The era of the grand movie palace was only a few decades, but it left its mark on American life.

"They built these giant movie theaters, because that was the technology of the time," Fosbrink says. "We need to make it bigger to show movies, newsreels, stage shows all day long. Large theaters would have ballrooms upstairs, bowling alleys in the basement, nurserie masters at using every squ generate revenue."

Another interesting coll Balaban and Katz Corpora which includes all the rep ater owners would fill out '30s — with the names of performed, even how much they were the big Chicago theater family." Fosbrink says. "They pioneered the idea of these grand movie palaces, 2,000 to 5,000 seats. Barney Balaban sold it to Paramount and became President of Paramount Pictures.

"Bob Balaban's (the acto

The classic movie palaces of the early 20th century are an obvious focus, but there are other things in the collection,

"A vast majority (of the collection) is centered around movie theaters, but we're interested in all theaters," Fosbrink says. "In Pittsburgh, a lot of Carnegie Libraries have theaters. We had a sizable collection donated a few year ago that was from an architectural firm that did strip-mall modernist movie theaters in

Normally, there's a staff of five, though it's down to three. A few didn't want to

Now, the case for historic preservation of classic theaters is fairly self-evident. Nobody thinks that investing millions in restoring the theaters that became the Byham, Benedum, Heinz Hall and the Palace in Greensburg was a mistake. Still, there are many, many more endangered theaters out there.

Ultimately, the Theater Historical Society of America could be a lot more visible in Pittsburgh, if all goes right.

"We do have bigger goals," says Fosbrink. "We would like to build a national museum, a Theater History Center, in the same place where the birth of the commercial theater industry happened."

Palace party puts emphasis on fundraising

BY SHIRLEY McMARLIN

Public response to the Palace Theatre's 90th anniversary celebration in 2016 has resulted in some changes to the Westmoreland Cultural Trust's upcoming Party at the Palace, set for Feb. 25.

While anniversary events led to renewed appreciation of the downtown Greensburg theater's cultural and historical significance, it also revealed some misunderstandings about the party itself, says Kelli Brisbane, assistant to Mike Langer, president of the trust, which operates the

"Some of the feedback I've gotten shows that we need to stress that this is a fundraiser for the Palace," Brisbane says. "Some people thought it was just a party to have a party."

"We also heard that some people thought that attendance is by invitation only, and of course, that's not the case," Langer adds.

Past events, billed as the Hollywood Party at the Palace, celebrated show business down through the decades. This year, the event has been rebranded as a "Party With A Purpose: 5 Parties, 1 Night to Support the Historic Palace Theatre," which emphasizes that proceeds will support theater operations, Langer says.

The evening will kick off as usual with an on-stage VIP pre-party, which will feature a video detailing $750,000 in recent theater upgrades and renovations.

"You can see the plaster and the painting and that type of thing, but a lot of (the work was done) behind the scenes: HVAC, plumbing, electrical," Langer says. "We're thrilled with the growth of the Palace in the last decade, but when you run 75,000 people through a 90-year-old building, you'll small themed parties-withinthe-party. Brisbane says.

While the usual black tie and evening gowns will certainly be appropriate, Brisbane says, some of the new festivities will lend themselves to more casual cocktail and party attire, which in turn may appeal to a new demographic.

"We'll still have plenty for the older generation to enjoy, but we're also trying to bring in some younger people," says event chairwoman Peg Colosimo. "The younger people on our committee have brought in some good

"I want to stress that this is a Westmoreland County function, not just a Greensburg one," she says. "We've reached out to people in Ligonier, Scottdale, all over the county, and we've had a great response in sponsorships."

The more intimate-themed gatherings will be scattered throughout the venue and even in the courtyard, where a whiskey and cigar lounge will be set up under a heated

A Pints & Pies Pub, with pizza, ale, desserts and acoustic music by Josh Starrett, will occupy the Upper Megan's Suite, while the suite itself will transform into a New York cocktails and cabaret lounge with vocals by Tony and Renata Marino and Courtney Harkins, along with John Noble interpreting Frank Sinatra.

On the mezzanine, chef Rizzi DeFabo will preside over the Tuscan Wine &

Cheese Lounge.

Held over from previous parties will be the main event-opening performance by the Stage Right Sensations on the grand staircase.

"Watching that dance routine on the marble steps has been, year after year, a crowd favorite," Langer says. "The kids love it and the crowd loves it."

Honoring the past while keeping up with the times is key to continued success, Langer and Brisbane agree.

"We believe (the Palace is) the anchor of the cultural district, and the idea that we've been here for 90 years has a very strong effect on the community," Langer says. "If you go back through the history books and look at who the major employers were (90 years ago), most of them are gone; but the Palace is still here. We're very proud

Brisbane's interest is both professional and personal: "My grandmother is 86, and she and my grandfather had their first date there."

'The Book of Mormon' remains fresh and funny

BY SALLY QUINN

Probably nobody in the world knows more about "The Book of Mormon" than Jake Emmerling — except maybe its creators, Trey Parker, Matt Stone and Robert Lopez.

As part of the ensemble, Emmerling has been touring with the record-breaking musical comedy since it opened in 2012 in Chicago, visiting more than 80 cities across the country.

It makes a stop here from Feb. 21 to 26 as a PNC Broadway in Pittsburgh season special at the Benedum Center.

His parents are pretty familiar with the show, too, says Emmerling, who was born in Monroeville and grew up in Derry.

They've seen "Book of Mormon" more than 20 times at almost as many cities.

"Of course, they're coming to see it in Pittsburgh twice — only twice," he says with a laugh. "They always joke that if someone is out, they can go onstage."

When "The Book of Mormon" opened on Broadway in 2011, it won nine Tony Awards. The story is about a pair of young Mormon missionaries who are sent to Africa where life is hard and the opportunity to convert the native villagers is even tougher.

The ridiculously funny show scandalized some audiences, while charming others with its warmhearted story. With the tour returning to cities a second, third and even a fourth time, many fans have seen it multiple times. This is its third visit to Pittsburgh.

Knowing the songs and punchlines in advance can enhance enjoyment of the show, Emmerling says. And with live theater, there's always something new for repeat customers.

"The beauty of that is there is a big cast turnover.

JOAN MARCUS

The "Book of Mormon" company with Jake Emmerling (third from the left).

I am the rare cast member who has been here for so long," he says. "As a cast member, it's fun to see that happen. The audience laughs at different lines or different jokes to a degree because of how the actors are presenting the characters. ... When you have a new actor come in and they portray the show in a different way, it makes it funny in a different realm.

"It brings a new heat to the show. I think that's why people love to still come and see it because it is always fresh and new."

For cautious first-timers, Emmerling has some advice: "Just come into the theater and enjoy the show from beginning to end," he says. "The whole story does a beautiful job of coming back to the beginning at the end. No matter what you believe, as long as you have faith and trust in something that's morally strong and guides you, then that's great."

Grab a bite and beer at the 'Rocks'

Rock-A-Fellas stands above the stereotypical sports bar

BY JOYCE HANZ

Bucking the sometimes typical sports bar image, Rock-A-Fellas Sports Grille in Sarver offers familyfriendly, American cuisine

 $\begin{array}{l} \textbf{REVIEW} & \text{in an upscale} \\ \text{setting.} \end{array}$

Rock-A-Fellas opened in 2007, with first-time restaurateurs Randy Scott and Gary Seifert combining their love of sports with a non-smoking venue, strategically located off of Route 28.

The grille, nicknamed "Rocks" by the staff, features high ceilings, warm hues and floor-to-ceiling windows, which bathe the eatery in natural light.

Two pool tables await players next to the bar area

Happy hour, beer tastings, drink and food specials and a weekly karaoke night and live entertainment are offered.

"People are often surprised that we are known as just a 'bar' because Rock-A-Fellas is a very familyfriendly restaurant," says Catherine Scott, who comanages with her husband, Aaron. A children's menu is offered.

Choose from more than 10 draft and 70 bottled beers, and cheer on your favorite Pittsburgh sports team.

"We get the largest crowds with our Penguins fans, hands down," Catherine Scott says. "But our biggest crowds come from Friday night football with Freeport football games."

Freeport High School's football stadium is located across the street from Rock-A-Fellas.

Diners can choose from nine wing flavors at Rock-A-Fellas Sports Grille in Sarver, including the Rockin' Sesame Ginger Rock-A-Fellas Wings.

restaurant, allowing diners away from the bar to keep up with the game.

"We like to keep it simple at Rocks," she says. "We want our customers to have a good time and feel at home. We believe that's what people are looking for in a small town sports bar and grille."

The menu is larger than most sports bars, offering entrees featuring steaks, ribs, shrimp, pork, pastas, burgers, gourmet salads and build-your-own pizzas made with fresh dough.

Twelve appetizer choices include Pub Pretzels, Beer Battered Onion Rings, Cajun Steak Tips, Build Your Own Nachos and a Flatbread of the Day.

The top sellers here are chicken wings, burgers and a huge fish sandwich called The Sea Monster ($9.99), which has dominated for six years as the top-selling sandwich at Rocks.

Patrons love the burgers, Catherine Scott says, and may select from eight different variations, like the Mad Cow Burger ($8.99), served with a choice of side.

"Our Mad Cow Burger has become a big hit too," she says, "It's so spicy the servers have to warn customers before they order it, and most can't finish it."

Aaron Scott brings more than 12 years of restaurant industry experience to their husband-and-wife management team.

As chef, he is currently revamping the menu with a March debut scheduled.

"Our Mad Cow Burger has become a big hit too. It's so spicy the servers have to warn customers before they order it, and most can't finish it."

"The new menu will have classic favorites that everyone loves, but some new items you wouldn't expect to see, including new wing sauces," Aaron Scott says.

While perusing the menu, look for the football logo by selections, highlighting them as a Rock-A-Fella's house specialty.

On a recent early evening visit, our dining crew ordered the Lager Steamed Shrimp ($9.99) to start. Large Old Bay seasoned and steamed Gulf shrimp arrived, paired with homemade cocktail sauce.

The shrimp tasted like we were on vacation down South — fresh, tender and delicious.

After devouring them we made a note to order this appetizer again on our next visit.

For an entree, we ordered the Chicken Parmesan ($12.99), a Rock-A-Fellas house specialty. An oversized breaded chicken breast topped with hearty marinara and provolone cheese rested on a bed of imported fettuccine. The sauce was rich and flavorful, and the chicken was beyond tender — reminding us of mom's homemade cooking.

Wing lovers can choose from nine flavors, and we ordered a dozen of the original seasoned Rock-A-Fellas Wings ($14.99). They didn't disappoint. The jumbo whole wings were fried and perfectly seasoned. Other flavor choices include Rockin' Sesame Ginger, Rockin' Ranch, Rockin' Garlic Parmesan and Rockin' Buffalo.

Deciding to build our own pizza, we went traditional with a pepperoni and cheese 12-inch pizza ($9.99, toppings .75 cents each). The red sauce was amazing.

Homemade and hearty, this pizza featured a fresh dough crust and one of the tastiest pizza sauce around.

"Our wish at Rock-A-Fellas is to be the perfect fit for any reason. Great food, great people and a relaxing and fun atmosphere," Catherine Scott says.

My friend was today's East, defending against 3NT.

"My partner led the queen of diamonds," my friend said. "I almost played low, but I was afraid declarer would have at least nine tricks with the clubs and spades if he got in. So I took the ace and shifted to the queen of hearts.'

His assessment of the defensive possibilities was on target — a heart shift was vital — but to have a chance, East must lead the three, not the queen, hoping South has K-x. BY KELLIE B. GORMLY artist Robin H.M. will be trying to break some Guinness records, by tattooing for 70 hours straight without sleeping. True story, and you can observe her in action Feb. 18 and 19.

Other tattoo conventions come to the Pittsburgh area, but they are smaller than this one being planned, and they don't have Pittsburgh roots, Miller says. She has been traveling around the world, meeting and tattooing fans, since she was on the television

"What we wanted to do was ... take the tattoo-convention model and push it to a new level," Miller

Last year, she won first place in the portrait category at the international Calgary Tattoo Expo.

Ticket sales begin at 11 a.m. each day, with the floor opening to the public at 1 p.m. Feb. 17 and noon Feb. 18 and 19. Closing Tattoo of the Day shows begin at 10:30 p.m. Feb. 17, 10 p.m. Feb. 18, and 6 p.m. Feb. 19.

A& E BRIEFS

Porter to perform

When Gregory Porter first appeared in Pittsburgh

at the beginning of this decade, he was a virtually unknown fellow in a curious little hat.

Gregory Porter

But his voice made him a frequent visitor here and elsewhere. He will bring it — and his great sense of song — Feb. 22 to the August Wilson Center, Pittsburgh.

The baritone has been on a steady rise to success since his first days at the Cabaret Theater and the JazzLive International Festival, where he was such a frequent guest he seems almost like a Yinzer.

But he moved up to Blue Note records. His "Liquid Spirit" album won a Grammy award in 2014 and his new "Take Me to the Alley" is nominated for one for 2017.

Music begins at 8 p.m. Admission: $55. Details: 412-456-6666 or trustarts.

Warsaw woodcuts

The Holocaust Center of Pittsburgh will host an exhibit opening and reception for "The Warsaw Woodcuts Series and Other Works by Bruce Carter" from 3 to 5 p.m. Feb. 19.

A Pittsburgh-based artist and Carnegie Mellon University art professor, the late Bruce Carter (1930-2016) is best known for creating a series of wood block prints relating to the Warsaw Ghetto.

Including 10 of Carter's works, as well as − Bob Karlovits a sculpture, the exhibit

'Father of Orphans' by Bruce Carter

reflects Carter's 20-year study of the Warsaw Ghetto, and includes anguished images that reflect the emotional difficulty the artist had with what he discovered in his research.

In addition to the works by Carter, the Holocaust Center will also display text panels discussing the Warsaw Ghetto and explaining the historical significance of the art.

Cost to attend the opening and reception is $10, and free for Holocaust survivors and students with a valid ID. Light refreshments will be served.

The Holocaust Center of Pittsburgh is located at 826 Hazelwood Ave in Greenfield and is open 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Regular admission is free. Details: 412-939-7289 or holocaustcenterpgh. org/upcomingevents/

Films to look forward to in 2017

BY LINDSEY BAHR

Hollywood might still be patting itself on the back for its 2016 films (particularly with the upcoming Oscars on Feb. 26, but there's a lot to look forward to in film this vear — in all genres. Here are 10-ish films to put on your radar for the year.

Charlize Theron and Vin Diesel in a scene from "The Fate of the Furious."

JOHN WICK: CHAP-TER 2 (Out now) THE FATE OF THE FURIOUS (April 14)

Two franchises, both unlikely, both silly and both endlessly watchable get new installments this year. Keanu Reeves is back as the vengeful hit man John Wick in the sequel to the 2014 sleeper hit. And the Fast and Furious crew is joined by Charlize Theron and Helen Mirren in movie No. 8, directed by "Straight Outta Compton's" F. Gary Gray.

Emma Watson as Belle and Dan Stevens as the Beast in "Beauty and the Beast," a live-action adaptation of the studio's animated classic.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST (March 17)

"Harry Potter's" Emma Watson stars as the beautiful, bookish Belle in director Bill Condon's live-action, musical adaption of the fairy tale, which he promises will include nods to both Disney's animated feature a new LAPD officer who as well Jean Cocteau's black and white classic. "Downton Abbey's" Dan Stevens plays the Beast opposite a strong supporting cast of Luke Evans, Ewan McGregor, Stanley Tucci, Emma Thompson and Gugu Mbatha-Raw.

GUARDIANS OF THE GALAXY VOL. 2 (May 5) SPIDER-MAN: HOME-COMING (July 7) THOR: RAGNAROK

(Nov. 3)

What superhero fatigue? The studios have assembled some formidable talent behind some of the year's most high-profile sequels (and reboots). Taika Waititi will bring his comedic edge to the "Thor" world, while James Gunn tries to recreate that mixtape magic with "Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2." One film that doesn't require any catch-up work is "Spider-Man: Homecoming," yet another reboot of the web-slinging teen, but a promising one — star Tom Holland upstaged even the likes of Robert Downey Jr. when introduced in "Captain America: Civil War.' Director Jon Watts says his "Spider-Man" will be in the vein of classic high school films.

ALIEN: COVENANT (May 19)

BLADE RUNNER 2049 (Oct. 6)

Ridley Scott is back to playing his old hits this year, with a twist. Scott directs the sixth installment in the "Alien" universe with "Alien: Covenant," about a crew traveling to a remote part of the galaxy in search of paradise, only to find something much more horrifying. Katherine Waterston stars with Michael Fassbender. As for "Blade Runner 2049," Scott's only producing — "Arrival" and "Sicario" director Denis Villeneuve is directing the longtimecoming sci-fi sequel, set 30 years after the original film. Ryan Gosling stars as needs to find Harrison Ford's Rick Deckard.

Gal Gadot stars as "Wonder Woman," in theaters on June 2.

WONDER WOMAN (June 2)

Gliding by the crazy fact that it's taken until 2017 for one of the most popular characters in comic book history to get her own feature film, this one also looks like it packs the potential to define this whole modern era of DC Comics adaptations ("Justice League," out Nov. 17, could too). "Wonder Woman" has the promising team of "Monster" director Patty Jenkins at the helm and Gal Gadot wielding the iconic lasso in this World War I-set origin story.

THE BEGUILED (June

Sofia Coppola is making a Western, and not just any Western — a remake of Clint Eastwood's 1971 film (itself an adaptation of "A Painted Devil" by Thomas P. Cullinan) about an injured Union soldier in an all-girls Confederate boarding school whose presence causes rifts among the women. Kristen Dunst, Nicole Kidman, Colin Farrell and Elle Fanning star.

DUNKIRK (July 21)

Christopher Nolan is perhaps the only filmmaker working on this level whose movies are events in and of themselves. He doesn't need the stamp of Intellectual Property to make his a must-see (regardless of what you think of "Interstellar"). "Dunkirk" takes us to the beaches of France early in WWII when the Allied forces were surrounded and evacuated. Newcomer Fionn Whitehead leads the cast, which includes Kenneth Branagh, Tom Hardy, Mark Rylance and even Harry Styles (yes, that Harry Styles).

VALERIAN AND THE CITY OF A THOUSAND PLANETS (July 21)

Most Americans probably aren't familiar with the French comic source material Valerian and Laureline, but don't let that dissuade you from checking out Luc Besson's ("Lucy," "The Fifth Element") wildly ambitious sci-fi epic starring Dane DeHaan and Cara Delevingne as a pair of space and time travelling agents.

BABY DRIVER (Aug. 11)

So Edgar Wright didn't get to do "Ant-Man." The maestro behind "Hot Fuzz" and "The World's End" has his own action pic up his sleeves, and an original one at that, about a getaway driver (Ansel Elgort), the girl he wants to leave it all behind for (Lily James) and the crime boss (Kevin Spacey) who might destroy it all.

STAR WARS: EPI-SODE VIII (Dec. 15)

At the rate of one new Star Wars film (spinoff or otherwise) a year for the foreseeable future, it's hard to imagine that The Force Awakens-level excitement can be sustained, but "Episode VIII" has its own credentials separate from the nostalgia of that galaxy far, far away. Simply: It's a Rian Johnson film, the mind behind "Looper" and "Brick," and he's setting the story for the final two films of the main trilogy (he's writing Episode IX but ceding directing responsibilities to Colin Trevorrow). There's also the bittersweet knowledge that it'll feature one of Carrie Fisher's final performances, fittingly in her most iconic role.
